Truman Asks 1.45 Billion to Arm Allies

Immediate Home Rule Here Urged By Truman

Calls on House To Pass a Bill He Can Make Law At This Session

(Text on Page 4)

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

President Truman last night called for prompt House approval of Washington home rule legislation.

The President told Speaker Rayburn in a letter that he hopes to have a Washington home rule bill "to sign into law" before Congress ends its current session. He said he hopes the House will not adjourn without completing action "on this important measure."

"It is little short of fantastic," the Chief Executive wrote, "that the Congress of the United States should—as it now does—devote a substantial percentage of its time to acting as a city council for the District of Columbia."

Mr. Truman said "the architects of our Constitution" did not intend to deprive the District of home rule. "The people of the District of Columbia should not be placed in a different status from that of the people of all other American cities and almost all democratic capitals of the world . . . so far as local self-government is concerned," the President wrote.

Mr. Truman also called for a reorganization of the District government, one of the aims of the home rule legislation, terming the present government setup here "complicated and administratively cumbersome."

"I am sure that the great majority of the people of Washington want home rule," said President Truman. "I am equally sure that they ought to have it without further delay."

The President's letter was made public at the White House as the House District Judiciary subcommittee appeared to be nearing the end of hearings on the Senate-approved and other home rule measures.

The hearing was marked by sharp clashes between witnesses and subcommittee members, and a round of criticism by subcommit-

Sample City Council Duties of Congress

As a sample of Washington "City Council" duties—deplored by President Truman—the Senate is slated to act late today on District bills to:

1. Prohibit sale of rockfish weighing more than 15 pounds.

2. Provide appointment of deputy and assistant disbursing officers.

3. Amend the podiatry practice law.

4. Add a permanent judge to Juvenile Court.

Bathing Suits Of Men Sinful, Too, Archbishop Says

Vatican City, July 25 (AP).—The Archbishop of Genoa warned today that bathing suits worn by men as well as women on Italy's beaches "open the doors to the worst kind of immorality."

The archbishop, Msgr. Giuseppe Ciri, told his priests in a circular letter that "licentious postures and shameless exhibitionism . . . commonly allowed on the beaches, especially the most noted ones, certainly violate moral law."

The letter, published by the Vatican organ Osservatore Romano, admonished parents that by exposing their children "to the danger of the worst resorts they ran the risk of committing mortal sin."

Dulles Picked For District Committee

NYHT News Service

Two committee assignments for Senator John Foster Dulles, of New York—neither of them on the Foreign Relations Committee—were selected yesterday by the Minority Committee on committees for recommendation to the Senate Republican conference today. Dulles was appointed to the Senate to succeed Robert F. Wagner (D.) who resigned.

Senator Hugh Butler, of Nebraska, chairman of the Republican committee on committees, declined to divulge decisions reached by his group, however, it was learned that places had been made for the new Republican member on the Post Office and Civil Service and District of Columbia committees. This was accomplished through agreement by two Republicans now assigned to those groups to accept the only two other relatively minor committee vacancies which were available to the Republicans, both of them on the Rules and Administration Committee.

Another committee vacancy, made available to the Republicans yesterday on the major Appropri-

Men's Suitings For Spring Cut 19% in Price

Auto, Steel Production Rises; Other Output Falls to 3-Year Low

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

General price cuts in widely differing industries marked yesterday's business news, along with reports of increased auto and steel production, but lessening outputs in other lines.

Price cuts were announced for woolen goods, radios and farm implements as follows:

1. The American Woolen Co., world's largest manufacturer of woolen and worsted fabrics, said in New York it was making one of the biggest price cuts in men's suitings in almost 30 years.

The reductions will be on the spring 1950 line of men's suitings. They run up to about 19 per cent compared with 1949. In dollars and cents they figure up to 70 cents a yard. The company said the cuts will bring its mens' wear fabrics, worsteds and tropicals, to the lowest possible point.

Down to $3.17½ a Yard

Piece-dyed, decorated 12-to-12½-ounce worsted, was $3.87½ a yard; will be $3.17½. A popular 9½-to-10-ounce tropical worsted will be cut from $3.47½ cents a yard to $2.90.

2. Sears Roebuck announced at Chicago it was cutting farm implements from 4 to 16 per cent, at once. Costs of manufacture did not warrant a cut, the company said, but "the facts of our present economic life make it apparent that the farmer must receive some price relief if the lagging farm implement market is to be stimulated."

Sample cuts: A side-delivery rake from $320 to $295; a garden tractor from $185 to $169.50; a corn planter from $120 to $105.

3. Westinghouse Electric Corp. sliced prices of 16 radio models from $5 to $200, effective at once. Its AM-FM-shortwave-phonograph combination was reduced from $499.95 to $299.95, down $200. Its phonograph combination console with AM-FM, formerly $239.95, is cut to $139.95—off $100. Other models reduced are two table mod-

Heat Hits 96; 95 Today; No Relief Seen

No Prostrations Reported as Glass Equals Mark of 4 Previous Roasters

For the fifth time this summer the temperature soared to its record figure of 96 degrees yesterday, with no relief in sight today.

The high figure was reached at 4 p. m., from a low starting point of 72 degrees at 5:42 a. m. It climbed steadily through the day to peak heat.

Humidity was 43 per cent.

And there will be more of the same today the Weather Bureau forecast.

The high today will be at least 95 degrees as a huge warm air mass steadily rolls in from the Middle West.

The high of 96 yesterday was equalled on June 26, July 5, 6 and 22.

Hot as the day was, not one case of heat prostration was officially reported from hospitals, the Ambulance Control Center, police and Federal and District agencies.

The heat wave, however, resulted in early dismissals of an estimated 5000 Federal and District workers.

Reports, unverified, had additional thousands of privately employed persons cutting the work day short and scurrying for cooling showers and pools.

"It will be pretty 'double D' hot today," a Weather Bureau attache declared.

Elsewhere in the Nation the mercury raced into the high 90s as the hot and sticky air mass eddied slowly toward the Eastern seaboard.

Highest temperatures were noted at Phillipsburg, Kans., where nearly 100 degrees was reached. It was 98 at Yuma, Ariz.; 97 at Danville, Va.; 94 at Augusta, Ga.; 95 at Grand Forks, N. Dak., and 93 at St. Paul. Coolest place in the Nation appeared to be Portland, Oreg., where, by contrast, Arctic temperature of 68 degrees was registered.

Lowest temperature for Washington today, the Weather Bureau said, would be 75 degrees, at 5 a. m.

We kept this information to the last—

It's not good.

The weather forecaster said: "I don't know when relief will come."

He said the heat would be on, at least for a couple of days.

Divorce Refused Woman Allergic To Her Husband

Los Angeles, July 25 (U.P.).—Superior Judge Ray Brockman ruled today that being allergic to one's husband is not grounds for divorce.

Mrs. Joyce G. Holdridge, 27, told the judge that whenever she got near her husband, Nolan Howard Holdridge, 26, San Francisco watchmaker, "I broke out in a rash from my head to my toes."

After two years' treatment, she was told the only thing to do was to leave her husband.

"Was he good to you?" the judge asked.

"Yes."

"Did he support you?"

"Yes, he did."

"Well, he is not cruel to you then, and there is nothing that permits me to give you a divorce."

3 Suspects Seized After $364,000 Theft of Jewels

New York, July 25 (U.P.).—Three robber suspects were caught by police today a few minutes after they stole four pieces of jewelry valued at at $364,000, from a Fifth Avenue jewelry store.

Police said a patrolman nabbed the three, one of whom carried a gun, as they fled the Brand Chatillon store at 703 5th ave. No one was injured in the scuffle. The jewelry was returned to its owners.

Mrs. Roosevelt Cites Support Of Al Smith

New York, July 25 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, answering charges of Francis Cardinal Spellman that she has a "record of anti-catholicism," said today she had supported Alfred E. Smith, a Catholic, in every campaign that he made.

She made the comment in her copyrighted column "My Day," published in the New York World-Telegram and other Scripps-Howard newspapers—"I want freedom of religion to prevail in this country," she wrote.

She said that in campaigning for Smith for President she was shocked "by the extent of what I considered bigotry against the Roman Catholic Church, and I certainly do not wish to encourage anything of that kind."

Cardinal Spellman in a letter to Mrs. Roosevelt last Thursday criticized her for her opposition to Federal funds for parochial and private schools. He said that "your record of anticatholicism stands for all to see—a record which you yourself wrote on the pages of history which cannot be recalled—documents of discrimination unworthy of an American mother."

"Now that I have had time to read the letter carefully," she said, "I shall, of course, answer the cardinal personally and in detail. However, since I consider it important that there should be as little bitterness as possible engendered among the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish groups, or any other religious groups in our Nation, I shall not discuss this question any further on a personal basis with Cardinal Spellman. Scope, Cost Of Arms Plan Draw Fire

Some Democrats Join Vandenberg, Dulles in Call for 'Interim' Program

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Leading Republican supporters of the North Atlantic Defense Treaty yesterday opened fire on the cost and scope of President Truman's initial $1,450,000,000 arms-to-Europe program.

Joined by some Democrats, Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.) called for a cutback "interim" program, pending common defense talks under the treaty.

It was the first major break in recent years in the Capitol's bipartisan foreign policy lineup and it obviously signaled rough going ahead for the program the Administration hopes to push through Congress this session.

Rewrite Appears Indicated

A complete rewrite job on the bill following weeks of hearings appeared indicated, with passage before adjournment still a toss-up.

Administration leaders prepared to make the effort, House Speaker Sam Rayburn called the program "vitally necessary if the Atlantic Pact is to be made as effective as we hope it will be."

Slating House hearings starting Thursday by his Foreign Affairs Committee, Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) said passage or nonpassage of the program "may spell the difference between security and disaster."

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said merely:

"I'm for an arms implementation program. It is up to Congress, however, how much it wants to appropriate and I'm not passing on that in advance."

Lucas disclosed that a move is under way to work out joint hearings by the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees, each now claiming jurisdiction.

Favor Limited Program

Vandenberg and Dulles, while critical of the scope of the President's bill, made it clear they favored a limited program of some kind until a joint defense is worked out under the treaty. Vandenberg told newsmen he thought it wou'd be "a calamity" if Congress failed to act at all.

But Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who voted against the treaty because of arms implications, flatly opposed any arms program at all "unless one of these nations is attacked."

Taft said the President asked Congress to "substantially abdicate all functions relating to foreign policy, and authorize the State and Defense departments to make alliances throughout the world and involve us in any and all wars, civil or external, going on anywhere in the world."

More Lend-Lease, He Says

The Ohioan called it "another lend-lease program . . . in time of peace and not of war" and said he doubted any President ever asked more power in time of peace or war.

Most critical among influential Democrats was Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), who told newsmen: "I don't think you can get a program like this through Congress even if we stay here two or three months."

Like Taft, George called it "a form of lend-lease, the fatal defect being that arms would be supplied to some countries on the basis of their own estimates of

Official Held in $50 Million Interstate Numbers Fraud

New York, July 25 (U.P.).—The secretary of the Cincinnati, Ohio, clearing house has been arrested in a police drive against a 50-million-dollar a year lottery ring, District Attorney Frank S. Hogan announced tonight.

Hogan said that Assistant District Attorney Augustus Marchettin had "just phoned" that Secretary Dennison Duble had admitted rigging the daily total figures of the Cincinnati clearing house.

Hogan said the interstate gambling ring was "the biggest in existence" and made "fantastic" profits.

The Cincinnati Clearing House is an institution where representatives of the city's banks meet each day to balance off checks drawn against each other. The clearing house figures represent the total value of checks "cleared" or balanced. The figures are considered valuable to business experts as a barometer of business volume. All big cities have such a clearing house but few issue daily figures.

Hogan also revealed the arrest of six persons in New York and three in New Jersey. They were being held in his office for "questioning."

He said Marchetti had said he would file a motion in the Court of Common Pleas in Hamilton County, Ohio, calling for copies of all records of the Cincinnati Clearing House from January, 1948, to the present time.

Hogan said the ten men arrested in the metropolitan area, three of them employes of the New York Journal-American, probably would be arraigned Tuesday.

The ring was smashed, Hogan said, with the arrest of William Tiplitz, 48, of Newark, in a Newark phone booth and a raid on a swank Newark home which served as the ring's main office. The owners of the home, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Swillman, were arrested after New York and New Jersey police allegedly confiscated large quantities of records and policy slips.

"The daily winning number in this racket has been successfully rigged over a long period of time and the result was that the play-

Ex-U. S. Worker Paid in $7.43, May Obtain $17,500 Pension

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

Because of a freak twist of the law a former Government employe who paid the grand total of $7.43 into the Civil Service retirement fund was disclosed yesterday to be eligible to collect benefits of $17,500 a year.

A House Civil Service Committee report released yesterday said that on the basis of life expectancy figures the former employe may collect up to $150,000 on his original $7.43 investment unless Congress passes restraining legislation. A bill to strengthen the Civil Service retirement law now is pending before the House.

The Civil Service Commission, sponsoring the proposed legislation, said it would effectively limit payment to the former employe to a $1950 annuity. Officials said they considered even that sum a substantial return on the original investment.

According to the House committee report the employe, whom it did not identify, fell into the pension bonanza by working for one month in the offices of a New York member of the House of Representatives. It was during that month—December, 1948—that he paid into the retirement fund the $7.43.

Prior to that, it was learned, the Arms Program Highlights

Summary of the arms program proposed by President Truman.

CASH ASKED—$1,450,000,000.

WHAT FOR—To strengthen military defenses of western Europe and several nations elsewhere in the shadow of Russian power. These include most North Atlantic Alliance countries as well as Greece, Turkey, Korea, the Philippines and Iran. Siam has been mentioned. Others might be aided if the Administration deemed it advisable.

WHAT IT BUYS—Equipment, delivery, technical and training assistance. For western Europe it is proposed to spend $938,450,000, together with 155 million dollars for stimulating arms production there. Other countries would get $300,580,000 worth of aid. A trouble-shooting fund of $45,000,000 for emergencies would be set up. Administration costs are estimated at $10,970,000.

WHO SPENDS IT—The President. The sum for each country is not written out in the proposed law. Congress is given a general outline of where the money should go. President Truman said he "should be able to make allocations as circumstances require."

'One Step' Toward Peace

Truman Signs Treaty, Sees 'Free World, Free From Fear'

President Truman described the North Atlantic Pact yesterday as a step toward a "free world, free from fear."

After signing the instrument of ratification at a White House ceremony, the President sent to Congress a plea for funds to arm free countries to resist aggression.

In his statement on the pact, he emphasized that this "is only one step."

The statement follows:

"The American people value peace and freedom above all things. Our ratification of the North Atlantic Pact with the overwhelming support of the Senate and the people shows our determination to preserve this peace and freedom.

"This treaty is a historic step toward a world of peace, a free world, free from fear, but it is only one step. We have malice toward none. With our partners in the pact and other like-minded people, we must, with God's help and guidance, work for peace with every means at our command. We must keep ourselves morally and materially strong. We must play our part in helping to strengthen freedom everywhere. We must work patiently and tirelessly to make the United Nations ever more effective for its great task. We must seek ever greater unity of purpose and of action in the cause of peace."

Senate Heads Fail to Ditch Aid Watchdog

Lucas Proposal To Slash Funds Of Unit Defeated

The Senate Administration leadership yesterday lost its first round on the $5,723,724,000 foreign aid bill when it tried and failed to abolish the Joint Congressional "watchdog" committee.

ECA supporters, who will try to partially restore sharply slashed Marshall Plan funds, and wipe out "restrictive" amendments, said the unexpected skirmish offered no test of sentiment on basic Marshall Plan issues.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) caught champions of the "watchdog" committee by surprise by raising a point of order against an Appropriation Committee amendment granting the investigating group $344,000 for the next fiscal year.

Vice President Barkley upheld the point, on grounds that a provision removing normal limits on travel expenses of the committee staff violated Senate rules against legislation on an appripriation bill.

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), chairman of the "watchdog" group originally set up by the GOP Eightieth Congress, prompt-

Bethesda Woman Burned by Flame From Car Motor

A burst of flames from the engine of an automobile severely burned a 40-year-old Bethesda woman yesterday.

Victim of the blaze was Miss Rose B. Crowe of 8001 Wisconsin ave. She received first, second and third degree burns, police said, when a mechanic started her car after priming the carburetor with gasoline.

Miss Crowe was standing near the front of the car when flames shot out and enveloped her before she could move. She ran screaming into the garage with her clothes blazing. The mechanic, John A. Funk of 6103 40th ave., Hyattsville, ran after her and beat the flames out with his hands.

Landlord Kills Tenant and Self To 'Show the OPA'

Atlanta, July 25 (AP).—Vowing he'd "show the OPA," a disgruntled landlord killed a tenant, wounded the tenant's pregnant wife then shot and killed himself last night.

The landlord, J. F. Bailey, 38, left a note in which he said he was going to "kill Bill Hayes and his wife and show the OPA they can't Joe Staling me around."

The note referred to the dead tenant, William J. Hayes, 26, and his 21-year-old wife. The young wife is expecting a baby in about a month. Doctors reported her wounds did not harm the unborn child.

Bailey had attempted to evict the Hayeses but the area office of the housing expediter intervened and allowed the couple to remain.

Bailey's note said:

"I'll just show the OPA the Hayes can be moved. It has come to a time that this is not a free country. The Federal Government taken over every body business. The OPA telling pepil what they got to do with they homes. Joe Staling just as well to take over. I have worked hard and saved anuff money to buy a home. Now since I got my home the OPA tell me how to run it."

But that doesn't mean controls are off now. The opinion will be appealed.

The opinion by Judge Elwyn R. Shaw was based on his finding that local provisions for decontrol by States and municipalities set aside the power of Congress by unlawful delegation of its authority.

Woods' Chicago attorney, William S. Kaplan, said he would move for the earliest possible review of the case by the Supreme Court.

His Message Urges Shield Against Red Aggression

United States Is Not Abandoning Hope in U. N., He Tells Congress

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday asked Congress for $1,450,000,000 in cash for a foreign military aid program to forge a "shield" against Soviet aggression.

Assailing Russia for creating "an atmosphere of fear and danger" in the world, the President said we have now learned the "unfortunate truth" that good intentions alone do not assure peace.

"We need to show the same firmness and resolution in defending the principles of peace that we have shown in enunciating them," the President declared in a message sent to Congress.

Their Defense Is Ours

Declaring that the major portion of the proposed aid would go to western European members of the North Atlantic Treaty, he said:

"Their defense is our defense and is of deep concern to us."

The arms program, he stated, does not mean we are abandoning hope in the United Nations, but we are forced to take further action for peace because of Russia's threats to international security.

Russia, he said, "has done its utmost to prevent European recovery."

Created Fear Atmosphere

The Soviet, "with its violent propaganda, its manipulation of the conspirational activities of the world Communist movement, and its maintenance of one of the largest peacetime armies in history, has deliberately created an atmosphere of fear and danger," said the Chief Executive.

On Capitol Hill, the arms program faces a stormy future, challenged by such key figures as Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican leader of this Nation's bipartisan foreign policy.

Legislation to carry out the program was introduced in the House, following reading of the President's message, by Representative John Kee (D., W. Va.), chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee.

Kee said his committee will begin hearings on Thursday, with Secretary of State Dean Acheson as the first witness. In the Senate there is dispute over whether the bill should go to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee or the Armed Services Committee, and the possibility of joint hearings has been suggested.

In his message, the President said:

"I would not suggest that this program alone will bring present international tensions to an end."

He said, "It will, however, preserve the initiative which the free nations of the world now have," and help to create a world struc-

21-Day Fast, Fast In Culvert, Takes 600 Lbs. Off Bull

Swoope, Va., July 25 (AP).—The veterinarian decided today that Elmer, the bull, would live. It's been touch and go.

Two railroad workmen found Angus Elmer, aged 1½ years, stuck in a culvert last Thursday. He'd been there, up to his knees in water, for 21 days. He had lost about 600 of his normal 900 pounds.

Elmer had inched in, they think, to escape the heat, rock had washed down behind him, and, presto, the exit was blocked.

Now, back in his barn on a bed of hay and moss, Elmer is fed every two hours on a formula of wheat bran, middlings, soy bean oil meal and cornmeal. He graduated to this from bottle feeding of milk and eggs. He'll soon do even better, but his doctor warns he still has a long way to go before he is back on his feet.

Truman Asks Congress for 1.45 Billions to Arm Friendly Nations

While President Truman dealt only generally with the provisions of the bill, they were spelled out in detail in a 41-page pamphlet released by the State Department.

The bill would:

1. Extend $938,450,000 for military equipment, delivery expenses, technical and training assistance to western European members of the pact.

2. Grant $300,580,000 for similar purposes to Greece, Turkey, Korea, the Philippines, and Iran.

3. Make available for the arms program "excess" military supplies which originally cost about 450 million dollars. The program will be "charged" only 75 million dollars for this—the estimated cost to put the arms in working order, and this figure is apportioned in the other outlay.

To Buy Raw Materials

4. Provide 155 million dollars for the western European countries in the form of dollar aid to buy raw materials they will manufacture into defense needs. This aid will help produce the equivalent of 700 million dollars' worth of arms in the next two years.

5. Authorize $45,000,000 for an "emergency fund" at the disposition of the President, to meet any "unforseen development" requiring funds.

6. Extend $10,970,000 for administrative expenses.

Another major aspect of the program, although not included in the $1,450,000,000 figure, would be contract authority authorizing the National Military Establishment to obtain military supplies for other countries.

The countries might include Canada, or Latin American Republics, which would not receive aid grants and would pay for deliveries under stated terms. Sums outstanding for this purpose could not exceed 100 million dollars at any one time.

A little more than two years would be required, it is estimated, to carry out the proposed program, with the need for further aid dependent upon the future security situation.

50 Per Cent From U. S. Stocks

About 50 per cent of the total equipment provided for the program would come from United States' military stocks, although in the first year, 70 per cent of deliveries would be from this source.

The bulk of the aid to Europe would be capital equipment, such as tanks, guns of various kinds, trucks, radar and communications equipment, ammunition, various types of aircraft, small arms, and lighter naval vessels—destroyers, net tenders, mine layers, etc.

The only reference to atomic weapons in any of the material released yesterday was a statement in the proposed legislation: "Nothing in this act shall alter, amend, revoke repeal or otherwise affect the provisions of the Atomic Energy Act of 1946."

Officials who drafted the program said this would bar shipment of any atomic weapons, but several Congressmen made it clear they would seek a far stronger and clearer ban than this.

The arms proposals for western Europe were based on requests for aid from the five Brussels Treaty powers, who have already established a defense council of their own—Great Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands—plus Norway, Denmark and Italy.

Canada, Portugal and Iceland, the remaining members of the 12-nation North Atlantic Pact, in addition to the United States, did not request aid by grant.

Officials handling the program declined, for security reasons, to discuss what size of defense force is contemplated in Europe, and would say only that the program does not envision expanding forces there, but equipping those already contemplated.

Report From Douglas

The State Department pamphlet, however, contained a report from Ambassador to Britain Lewis A. Douglas on progress of the Brussels Treaty (Western Union) defense grouping, in which he stated:

"Compulsory military service exists in all (five) powers for periods of from one to two years and of the total Western Union population of 108 million, some 1½ millions are serving in peacetime."

The defense organization of those five powers, he said, "has . . . achieved very considerable progress in the combined training of Western Union forces."

That defense grouping, which has its own joint strategic command, is to be included in some manner in the defense council to be established under the North Atlantic Treaty.

50 Million Already Asked

President Truman said in his message that the total request for new appropriations for fiscal 1950 would be $1,400,000,000 as he has already asked for 50 million dollars for continued military aid to Greece and Turkey.

The proposed bill would bring all military aid together into a "unified program," he said, "adaptable in its administration to the operation of our foreign policy."

While the United States is reluctant to think in terms of "forces," he said, "the policemen in our communities seldom have to use their weapons, but public peace would be greatly endangered if they did not have them."

"Helping free nations to acquire the means of defending themselves is an obligation of the leadership we have assumed in world affairs.

"To be effective, the aid which we supply to other nations for defending themselves must be planned ahead," he said; must meet "realities," and must not be "wasted."

Prompt Action Urged

"Above all, it is urgent to initiate a program of aid promptly if we are not to lose the momentum already gained toward recovery and political stability."

". . . The military assistance which we propose for these countries will be limited to that which is necessary to help them create mobile defense forces.

"Our objective is to see to it that these nations are equipped, in the shortest possible time, with compact and effectively trained forces capable of maintaining internal order and resisting the initial phase of external aggression.

"At the present time, the military power which is the greatest deterrent to aggression is centered in the United States, 3000 miles away from Europe. It must be made clear that the United States has no intention, in the event of aggression, of allowing the peoples of western Europe to be overrun before it own power can be brought to bear."

Must Be Concluded

Reviewing aid to other countries, the President said military action against the Greek guerillas must be successfully concluded before economic reconstruction can be accomplished.

In Turkey, he said, "Our aid has lessened the burden of military preparedness which the threatening pressure of the Soviet Union has imposed on a primarily agrarian economy."

Since May, 1947, aid to Greece and Turkey has totaled about 500 million dollars.

In Iran, United States surplus arms has aided in improving the army's effectiveness and maintaining internal order, said the President, with further aid needed.

Essential to Survival

The new republic in south Korea, he said, "is menaced by the Communist regime in the northern part of the country," and United States equipment for security "is essential to the survival of the Korean republic . . ."

It is also necessary, he said, "to continue our program of limited aid to the Republic of the Philippines," while Canada and the American republics should be aided in procuring defense equipment.

The bulk of the aid outlays, to Western Europe, "constitute only a minor fraction of what these countries will spend themselves," said the President, noting the Brussels Treaty powers "have undertaken annual military expenditures equivalent to about 5½ billion dollars."

There'll Be Some Strings

There will be some strings on the aid grants, the President pointed out.

"Agreements will be executed with the recipients, to provide for mutual assistance and to assure proper use of the equipment furnished.

"The recipient nations will be required to limit the use of the items supplied to the defense of geographic areas, and will not be permitted to transfer them to other nations without the consent of the United States.

"The President should be authorized to terminate our aid at any time. Aid will be terminated in the event that a recipient acts in a manner inconsistent with the policies and purposes of the program or with its obligations under the Charter of the United Nations."

Burden Will Lessen

Duration of the program, he said, "depends on many unpredictable factors. Our burden will undoubtedly lessen as our program for peace brings its returns."

The State Department, in explanation of the program which was drafted by a committee headed by Dr. Lloyd V. Berkner, special assistant to the Secretary, and including representatives of the National Military Establishment and Economic Cooperation Administration, stated:

"The Military Assistance Program and the North Atlantic Treaty are separate and distinct. Nevertheless the objectives of both are to maintain and develop by self-help and mutual aid, individual and collective capacity to resist aggression."

It does not "implement" the treaty, but "complements" it, the department said, and each would be necessary without the other.

A "basic principle" of the plan, it was said, is "that it will not be permitted to endanger economic recovery."

Present defense production in Europe was described as "close to the maximum consistent with civilian production for recovery."

A sizable portion of the materiel aid to Europe will be in replacement parts for exisiting equipment. Technical and training assistance will involve a small but vital percentage of the aid, it was said.

For security reasons, officials said, there will be no public breakdown showing which countries will receive what weapons, but this information will be given to congressional committees in executive sessions.

The weight of the program, it was said, "will not appreciably affect the United States economic structure," and there will be only minor effect on resources.

However, "the executive branch recognizes that a delicate balance has to be reached in the process of apportioning existing military equipment between United States reserves and the forces of recipient countries.

"The time element is most important. A calculated risk has to be assumed, since the bulk of the equipment supplied from NME reserves has to be replaced with similar or improved equipment."

In the proposed bill is authority to require recipient countries to deposit "counterpart funds," in a manner similar to the Marshall Plan, but "such action is not now contemplated," the department said.

"It is contemplated that countries receiving military assistance will, in most cases, make local currency available to the United States missions to meet local administrative expenses in carrying out the program."

Works Both Ways

The bill also authorizes the United States to receive in turn any "mutual assistance" from recipients. Officials said this would apply to strategic materials needed here, although there was no discussion of that in yesterday's publications.

In explanation of the "reimbursable aid provisions" of the bill—placing contracts which friendly nations would later pay for—the department said this would promote standardization of weapons and help strengthen participants in the Rio Treaty of 1948—who are also bound to the United States for "mutual aid."

"Similar cooperation" in arms procurement aid, it was said, is planned with "certain countries in the Near East, South Asia, and the Far East.

"Loaning" such funds for arms purchases would prevent tieing-up "meager dollar balances of the purchasing countries from the time they place their orders until delivery is accomplished," and this could also be used to extend technical aid.

Calls for RFC Advance

To get the arms program under way if the authorization is approved—without waiting for appropriations action—the bill calls for a 125-million-dollar advance from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

To determine program policy the legislation calls for a Foreign Military Assistance Steering Committee composed of the Secretary of State as chairman, and the Secretary of Defense and ECA Administrator as members.

The actual working committee would be an interdepartmental group called the Foreign Military Assistance Coordinating Committee, headed by a Director for Foreign Military Assistance, appointed by the Secretary of State.

Overseas, there would be a European Coordinating Committee headed by the Ambassador to Great Britain and including the special ECA representative for Europe and a senior United States military representative. In each participating country, program representatives would be attached to the United States diplomatic mission.

Man Admits Lying in Loyalty Quiz

New Orleans, July 25 (AP).—A former Communist pleaded guilty in United States District Court today to charges of making false statements to a Government loyalty board and asked to be placed on probation.

Judge Herbert Christenberry set Friday at 2 p. m. as the time to pass sentence on Robert Edgar Himmaugh, indicted in the Government's first case of this type against a former employe.

Himmaugh, a balding, bespectacled former employe of the Federal Barge Lines, pleaded guity to testifying falsely when he told a loyalty board that: (1) he had never been a member of the Communist Party, (2) he had never attended Communist Party meetings, (3) He had never solicited shipmates and acquaintances to become members of the Communist Party.

There are five counts to the indictment. The maximum penalty would be five years imprisonment on each count.

James E. Palmer, jr., of Washington, special assistant to Attorney General Tom Clark, said this is the first case in the Nation in which a former Federal employe has been charged with making false statements to a loyalty board. However, he said, there are other cases pending involving employes engaged in allegedly Communist activities.

A House Un-American Activities Committee report yesterday said a woman employe of the United Nations once acted as a courier for the Communist Party while working for the United States Government.

The woman is Mrs. Mary Jane Keeney, 51, of New York. She has told the committee under oath that she was never a member of the Communist party.

Mrs. Keeney, who works in the document control section of the U. N. secretariat, denied last night she ever acted as a Communist party courier.

In a statement issued at Lake Success through the U. N. press department facilities she also repeated her previous denial of allegations that she is a Communist.

Mrs. Keeney's statement said that "the incident referred to in the report of the Un-American Activities Committee was wholly innocent and trivial. Several friends had asked me to purchase for them in Paris various works in French which were not at the time obtainable in the U. S., largely because the trade in books had not yet been resumed following the war. The manila envelope I gave to Mr. Bernstein contained a volume of Resistance literature, published by the Editions de Minuit, an underground organization of well-known French writers whose production greatly aided the French people to hold out during the occupation.

"The Editions de Minuit have since been reprinted in thousands of copies and hold an honored place in the history of French letters.

The committee's accusation was based on a report, apparently written by an FBI agent, which figured in the recent trial of Judith Coplon. Miss Coplon, a former Justice Department employe, was convicted earlier this month of stealing Government secrets to aid a foreign power, Russia.

The committee's report said:

"The FBI relates that two confidential informants have advised them that Mrs. Keeney is a member of the Communist Party."

Mrs. Keeney and her husband, Phillip, 58, testified before the committee about two months ago. He was dismissed as a civilian employe of the Army in Japan in 1947, and last winter tried to leave the United States without a passport on the Polish line Batory, the escape ship of Communist Gerhart Eisler.

During the war, both Keeneys worked for the Foreign Economic Administration in Washington, and each has worked for other Government agencies.

The report regarding Mrs. Keeney's alleged operation as a Communist courier said she returned from Europe on March 9, 1946, and was seen that day to pass a large manila envelope to a man named Joseph Bernstein, "suspected of being engaged in Soviet espionage."

The envelope, the report suggests, later was given by Bernstein to a man named Alexander Trachtenberg, who was described by the Un-American Activities Committee as a "high functionary of the Communist Party."

Mrs. Keeney had gone to Europe on the staff of the American representative to the Allied Reparations Commission, the committee said. She moved to the State Department when the commission's activity was transferred there.

British Rail Tieup Fought

London, July 25 (NYHT).—A few hours after London's 16,000 dockers went back to work this morning, trade union officials representing Britain's 600,000 railway employes met here in emergency session to avert an impending "go slow" campaign which would cripple the nation's transport system.

It was decided at the special meeting today of the National Union of Railwaymen to send a union deputation to see Minister of Labor George Isaacs Tuesday on pay raise demands.

A national rail slowdown at this time would prove exceedingly embarrassing to the Labor government which has pust had such a rocky passage in connection with the 24-day London dock strike. The British cabinet today considered the new crisis and heard reports from Isaacs and Alfred Barnes, Minister of Transport.

U. S. Berlin Staff to Move

Berlin, July 25 (AP).—A major shift in American personnel from Berlin to western Germany was reported today by military government sources.

The plan is to concentrate in Frankfurt, business heart of the Anglo-American zone, and Bonn, the capital of the federal republic.

The Berlin forces will serve as an outpost to handle the four-power city and relations with the Russians.

Tentative date for the move is August 10, it was said. About 200 military government officials will be shifted.

Remaining in Berlin will be about 75 officials who deal with the Russians, on all-German questions, and about 100 employes of the Berlin city military government.

Army sources said the Sixteenth Infantry Regiment also will be transferred to the zone. Constabulary troops probably will remain in Berlin.

A-Bomb Blasts In Siberia Reported

Paris, July 25 (U.P.).—The weekly newspaper Samedi-Soir said today in a copyright article that Russia exploded its first successful atom bombs July 10 in Siberia. The source of the information was not given.

The paper, which is considered anti-Communist, said this was the real reason for President Truman's recent conference with top atomic authorities.

The explosion took place somewhere in Siberia, near Longitude 46 east, Latitude 53 north, Samedi-Soir said. This would place it in the Saratov area about 500 miles north of Stalingrad.

The article said a German scientist, Hanks Lakert, who had worked in factories in the Ural Mountains, reported to the British intelligence service in Berlin at the end of June that the Russians now possess the atom bomb.

The article said that on July 4, a Russian Artillery Captain Ivan Vassilievitch Vodopianov "confirmed this." As a result, the paper said, American seismic stations were alerted and on July 10 distinctly "detected three atom bomb explosions in Siberia."

Three Groups Added To Subversive List

Attorney General Clark yesterday put three more groups on the Government's list of subversive organizations.

All were classed as Communist in a report to the loyalty review board which heads up the program of checking on the loyalty of Government employes.

Active membership in the organizations is grounds for dismissal of a Government worker. The groups are:

American Rescue Ship Mission, listed as a project of the United American Spanish Aid Committee.

Emergency Conference to Save Spanish Refugees, described as the founding body of the North American Spanish Aid Committee.

National Conference on American Policy in China and the Far East, which Clark said was a conference called by the Committee for a Democratic Far Eastern Policy.

Russians Now Deny Blockade Existed

Berlin, July 25 (AP).—The Russians denied tonight that the "little blockade" of Berlin, which the Western Allies have been protesting formally for 12 days, exer existed.

In a letter to the British military government, Lieut. Gen. M. I. Dratvin, Soviet deputy military governor in Germany, said that "statements about recent restrictions allegedly imposed by Soviet authorities on freight traffic from the western zones to Berlin lack every foundation."

The western powers announced previously the Russians had suddenly closed all entry points for Berlin-bound highway traffic except Helmstedt. Today at least three of these points were reported open again.

The Russians claimed that such traffic was not provided for in any of the existing agreements.

China Reds Claim Fall Of Liling

Hongkong, July 25 (U.P.).—The Nationalist Central News Agency said today Communist troops in heavy fighting had captured Liling, important government defense base protecting the Canton-Hankow railway.

It said the Fortieth and Forty-second armies of Manchurian Gen. Lin Piao enveloped Liling and forced the Nationalists to retreat south. Liling is 25 miles southeast of Chuchow, junction of the Canton-Hankow and Chekiang-Kiangsi railways.

A dispatch from Changsha, government base 35 miles north of Chuchow, said severe fighting was raging only 20 miles from Chuchow.

Thomas Mann Faces His Accusers in Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, July 25 (AP).—Thomas Mann talked back to his German critics tonight, stoutly denying charges he betrayed Germany by fleeing Hitler's rule.

In his first public appearance in Germany in 16 years, the noted German author vigorously defended his course in fleeing Nazi Germany and becoming a United States citizen, instead of staying to fight Nazism.

He spoke here at a festival honoring the famous German poet, Johann Wolfgang von Goethe.

"It is claimed," Mann said, "that I watched the tragedy of my people from far away in comfortable circumstances."

"No, no," he declared. "I participated in it."

"I did not slander, betray and disavow Germany from a safe distance as malicious ignorance reproaches me of having done," he said.

"Those who heard my radio appeals to my homeland know," he maintained, "that every hot word of my fury was directed only against the seducers in power in Germany and their crimes."

"These appeals were prompted by the wish to give courage to those Germans who felt much as I did," he said, "and they did give consolation and strength to many."

This appeared to be in answer to one published criticism of his delayed return.

"We who fought Nazism on German soil for 12 years think those who invited Mann to a public festival in Frankfurt were badly advised," wrote Fabian Von Schlabrendorff, one of the leaders in the 1944 bomb plot against Hitler.

"Whether I am welcome here or not," Mann said defiantly, "I would have felt it deplorable if I had paid homage to Goethe only from outside, and had avoided Germany. I am facing my enemies as well as my friends to show that I am not hiding from them."

Is Well Guarded

Mann is being guarded by four plainsclothes policemen.

Mann came here as the winner of Frankfurt's annual Goethe prize for literature.

He disclosed he will also go to Weimar in the Russian zone August 1 to accept another Goethe prize offered by that city.

He insisted his trip to the Soviet zone "has not the slightest political significance."

"I am no Communist," he said. "But what you see today is more Russian than Communist."

"Communism," he added, "has some relation to ideals of humanity and a better future, while Nazism was just plain devilish."

Truman's Letter on Home Rule

The text of President Truman's Letter to Speaker Rayburn on District home rule:

ON MAY 31, 1949, the Senate passed, without a dissenting vote, S. 1527, a bill to give home rule to the people of the District of Columbia. A subcommittee of the House Committee on the District of Columbia is now holding hearings on this legislation. I am writing to you to express my hope that the House will complete legislative action on a home-rule bill and that it will be sent to me to sign into law before this session of the Eighty-first Congress adjourns.

As passed by the Senate, the bill has three major purposes: (1) to relieve the Congress as much as possible of the burden of District of Columbia affairs, without surrendering its constitutional power; (2) to create a representative local government for the District of Columbia chosen by the qualified electors; and (3) to provide an efficient and economical government for the District of Columbia.

I am very much favor of all of these objectives.

IT IS little short of fantastic that the Congress of the United States should—as it now does—devote a substantial percentage of its time to acting as a city council for the District of Columbia. During the past two years, during which it was confronted with many major problems of national and international importance, the Congress has had to find time to deal with such District matters as parking lots, the regulation of barbers, the removal of street obstructions, and the establishment of a Metropolitan Police Force Band, to name only a few.

The people of the District of Columbia should not be placed in a different status from that of the people of all other American cities and almost all democratic capitals of the world in so far as local self-government is concerned. In my Message to Congress transmitting the Budget for the fiscal year 1947, I said:

The District of Columbia, because of its special relation to the Federal Government, has been treated since 1800 as a dependent area. We should move toward a greater measure of local self-government consistent with the constitutional status of the District. We should take adequate steps to assure that citizens of the United States are not denied their franchise merely because they reside at the Nation's Capital.

It was not the intention of the architects of our Constitution to deprive the District of Columbia of home rule. Writing on this subject in The Federalist, James Madison said that the inhabitants of the District "will have . . . their choice in the election of the government which is to exercise authority over them" and that "a municipal legislature for local purposes, derived from their own suffrages, will of course be allowed them."

THE ESTABLISHMENT of a well-organized and efficient governmental system in the District of Columbia is a desirable adjunct to the successful operation of the home-rule principle.

The present organization of the District government is complicated and administratively cumbersome. I am strongly in favor of better organization and greater efficiency throughout the Executive branch. The District of Columbia government should not be an exception carved out from the general rule.

There is nothing partisan about this proposal. The platforms of both major parties urge home rule for the District. The bill which passed the Senate unanimously received the support of both Republican and Democratic members of that body. I am sure that the great majority of the people of Washington want home rule. I am equally sure that they ought to have it without further delay. I hope that the House will not adjourn this session without completing action on this important measure.

At Home Rule Hearing . . .

The Washington Post

TAKE ISSUE WITH POST—Chairman Oren Harris (D., Ark.) of the House District Judiciary subcommittee, at yesterday's hearing on D. C. home rule, challenges a Sunday editorial in The Washington Post as "an unwarranted attack." At right, Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.), subcommittee member, joins him in protesting a story in The Washington Post of Monday. At extreme left is Representative John J. Allen, jr. (R., Calif.)

tee members of an article and an editorial on home rule in The Washington Post.

Another session, possibly the last, is set for 10 a. m. Wednesday. A majority of the subcommittee have gone on record in earlier actions against home rule, but members on both sides of the issue have given recent indications the matter will be placed before the full House District Committee for a decision.

District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) who took a lead in scheduling the current House hearings despite his record of opposing home rule, received word of the President's letter without comment.

Refuses Predictions

McMillan declined to predict whether the home rule bill would be sent either from the subcommittee to the full District Committee, or from the District Committee to the House, or when either step might be taken.

In opening yesterday's home rule hearing, Subcommittee Chairman Oren Harris (D., Ark.) sharply protested an editorial last Sunday in The Washington Post. The editorial had started: "If endless talk to prevent legislative action is a filibuster, the home rule hearings before Representative Oren Harris are getting close to the point of qualifying."

Harris retorted at the hearing: "The unwarranted attack and the apparently deliberate distortion of the facts that have appeared in that great paper are somewhat unfortunate."

Harris and Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.), then joined in objection to a paragraph in a home rule story in The Washington Post Monday: "Hearings were to end last week but Chairman Harris has indicated he probably will keep them going as long as possible to avoid a committee vote this session."

"I challenge that statement," said Harris, "and it would seem to me that those interested in this matter should not make such unwarranted statements."

Not to Be Bulldozed

Abernethy indorsed Harris' comment and said he wanted to serve notice on The Washington Post "that I personally am not going to be dulldozed into reporting out a bill today or any time until the committee has had a chance to function in an orderly manner."

Representative John J. Allen, jr., (R., Calif.) a strong supporter of home rule, joined in taking issue with the suggestion that the subcommittee was seeking to kill the bill by delay.

"The only action in effect that we are taking to delay is listening to the people who want to testify," said Allen. "They ought to be consistent—either don't come up to testify or don't complain about the length of the hearings."

Sharpest clashes occurred during testimony by James William Bryan, representing the Democratic Central Committee of the District in support of the Senate-approved home rule bill.

He drew sparks when he said that he had heard Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), author of the Senate-passed home rule bill, praised by members of the subcommittee when he testified to them, "then as soon as his back is turned his bill is called a phony bill."

He said Representative Abernethy had used that term, and he told Abernethy, "you insulted Senator Kefauver."

"You're just as crazy as the devil," replied Abernethy. He added that Senator Kefauver had taken no offence and asked Bryan "What right have you to take offense?"

"O. K.," said Bryan. "No O. K.," said Abernethy, "You're not getting off that easy."

Denounces Bill Anew

Abernethy then went on to denounce the bill anew as a phony bill, a proxy bill, and a synthetic bill.

Harris finally gaveled them to silence, then Bryan read a prepared statement. It led to a further clash. "Should this committee refuse, or by calculated delay, deny the House an opportunity to vote, it is inevitable that ugly charges will be made," Bryan said.

Allen stopped him to ask whether he was charging that the committee had been using "calculated delay."

Bryan reread the sentence, emphasizing the "should."

Even KKK Charges

"It will be felt," Bryan continued, "and vehemently expressed by many that the Ku Klux Klan reaches from the South to and across the Potomac. It will be stated that it is the hooded and sinister influence which is denying the citizens of the District the right to vote."

Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn), later told him "I'm not concerned about" the KKK charge. "I don't think the KKK affects me very much," said O'Hara. "I think you could have left that out of your statement. Of course, any kind of charges can be made."

"I've heard some made," said Bryan. "I've heard it charged that a man who was for home rule was a Communist."

Abernethy asked Bryan for his views on school and playground segregation, and Bryan declined to give them, saying the questions were "pitfalls." He said he was a writer and would write Abernethy an article on those questions if Abernethy wanted to pay for it. "I wouldn't give you 15 cents for it," retorted Abernethy.

New Appeals Heard

The subcommittees also heard new appeals for favorable action on home rule legislation from Maynard B. DeWitt, of the American Veterans Committee; Harry N. Stull, of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, the Rev. Orris G. Robinson, of the Washington Federation of Churches, and Charles E. Sands, of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders International Union, AFL.

Marvin M. McLean, former president of the Brookland Citizens Association, opposed the home rule plan, saying it had been bottled up for 75 years, and should stay that was for 75 years more.

'Ohio Avenue' Backers Run Into History

Relentless Representative Thomas A. Jenkins (R., Ohio) yesterday again sought to have a Washington street named after his State and again ran into bitter citizen resistance.

At a public hearing in the District Building, Jenkins appealed to the Commissioners to give the name Ohio ave. to M st. and Canal rd. nw., from 35th st. to the District line.

He ran headlong into impassioned opposition from Stanton Kolb of the Georgetown Citizens Association and Harold B. Hinton, representing the Progressive Citizens' Association of Georgetown.

Kolb testified that Canal rd. should not be renamed because George Washington named the canal and the road "Chesapeake and Ohio." "I'm sure the Commissioners' do not want to override the wishes of the father of our country," he said.

Kolb added that he did not believe Ohio residents would favor making such a change either.

Jenkins then took the stand, declaring that he represented Ohio and figured he knew his people's wishes better than Kolb did.

"Yes, Ohio does have representation in Washington," snapped Kolb, "but we in Washington are represented by no one. Hearings such as these are the only voice we have in our own affairs."

The Commissioners took the controversial matter under advisement as Commissioner Guy Mason commented:

"Apparently no one objects to Ohio. District residents just don't want to make a change. Some people don't even want to change their shirts."

FBI Laboratory Handled 102,327 Examinations

The FBI laboratory was a busy place during the fiscal year ending June 30, with a total of 102,327 scientific examinations made, J. Edgar Hoover, director, reported yesterday.

Not only did the FBI make its own examinations, but acted on 21,280 requests from other Government agencies and local law enforcement groups of the Nation.

Outstanding in the FBI's year's work were examinations of 15,524 fraudulent checks, having a "face" value of $2,817,912.

House Unit Votes School Health Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A compromise school health bill was approved by a House Commerce subcommittee yesterday but both Democratic and Republican leaders privately predict that an over-all Federal aid-to-education bill will not be enacted by the House this session.

The flames of religious controversy fanned by the exchange between Archbishop Francis Cardinal Spellman and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt have caused congressmen to seek a "cooling-off" period, leaders said yesterday.

Both Administration leaders and members of the House Labor and Education Committee predict that action on the Senate-passed $300,000,000 aid-to-education bill will go over until next January.

The $35,000,000 measure to aid the health of all the Nation's school children, whether or not they attend public schools, was worked out in conference between Chairman Percy Priest (D., Tenn.) of the Commerce subcommittee and House Democratic Leader John McCormack (D., Mass.).

Very similar to a school health measure already passed by the Senate, the bill contains what Priest terms some "psychological amendments" to make sure there is no discrimination against those pupils who attend parochial schools.

It is expected to be acted upon favorably by the full Commerce Committee Wednesday, Priest said.

But even this measure, minor compared to the 300-million-dollars-a-year bill for educational purposes, is not expected to win House action this session.

The full committee on Education and Labor is expected to meet sometime this week to consider a subcommittee report indorsing a Federal aid-to-education bill introduced by Representative Graham A. Barden (D., N. C.)

This measure, which sparked the smoldering religious row into open flame, is given no chance of full comittee approval. The Barden bill limits the use of Federal funds to public schools only, makes no provision for equable distribution of funds in States which have segregated schools systems, and provides for taxpayers to seek injunctions if they believe the bill is or is about to be violated.

Republican members of the committee say that the Senate-passed measure, which leaves it up to the States to determine how the funds shall be spent, has little chance of committee approval. GOP members claim the furthest they will go is a bill to aid only those States actually in need of Federal funds to improve their educational systems.

Even without the religious controversy, there was a general lack of enthusiasm in the House for enactment of Federal aid to education.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) makes no secret of the fact that he is opposed to it in principle although not actively blocking it, and GOP forces, lead by House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) have long been against it.

Both Republicans and Democrats say that the present fiery religious battle has placed so many members of Congress from districts made up of a nearly equal proportion of Catholics and Protestants on the spot and there is an overwhelming sentiment to let the fury die down before action.

The health bill, like the Senate-passed measure, provides that in states whose laws prohibit the use of public funds for nonpublic schools the Federal security administrator would be authorized to distribute funds directly to the nonpublic schools for health services.

Scheele Asks More U. S. Aid For World Health Group

Surgeon General Leonard S. Scheele of the Public Health Service yesterday called upon the United States for increased contributions to the United Nations World Health Organization.

Schelle, who recently returned from the Second World Health Assembly at Rome, also told newsmen that he hoped the United States, would aid in financing a "supplemental WHO program of 10 million dollars" through President Truman's Point Four proposal.

The law under which the United States joined WHO limited this country's annual contribution to $1,920,000. This was based on an entire budget for WHO of five million dollars—the rest made up by other member nations.

However, WHO at Howe adopted a budget calling for seven millions, Scheele said. The constitution for WHO provides that this country should provide a little more than 38 per cent of the entire budget—the remainder from the other 50-odd members. This is the same proportion America contributes to the United Nations.

"If we are to meet our obligations—and under the WHO constitution to which we have subscribed we are obligated to support the adopted program." Scheele said, "the share of the United States for next year would be roughly two and a half millions.

Scheele then pointed out that the other countries were anxious to share the burden of expense. The United States load was cut from 38 to 36 per cent," he said.

Russia, Byelo-Russia and the Ukraine—all states of Soviet Russia who originally joined WHO, did not attend, Scheele said. Virtually all the satellite nations behind the Iron Curtain, however, including Poland, Romania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, were there.

The supplemental budget for which Point Four funds are asked, Steele said, would be spent for "added multinational demonstration teams of doctors, nurses, sanitary engineers, who will visit underprivileged countries to demonstrate the methods of combating disease." He said it would also finance "added control programs for such diseases as malaria, cholera, tuberculosis and venereal disease, and extended research in various scientific fields."

"It is axiomatic," Scheele said, "that in the modern world the prosperity of any single nation is bound up with the prosperity of the other nations.

"It is also axiomatic that you cannot build a sound economy with a population that drags out its days in a state of semi-illness."

Scheele said that "of the estimated world population of 2.2 billion more than a billion annually suffer from disease, much of it chronic, much of it preventable and a high percentage curable.

"In Egypt, about 65 per cent of the population suffers from schistosmiasis, a water-borne disease, and one of the most debilitating illnesses. Between 60 and 70 per cent of Egypt also suffer from vision-limiting trachoma. Malaria afflicts more than 300 million people annually.

Douglas Undergoes Third Eye Operation

London, July 25 (AP).—United States Ambassador Lewis Douglas underwent a third operation today in an effort to save the sight of his left eye.

The operation—to remove a cataract which formed after Douglas snagged his eye with a fish hook April 4—lasted almost an hour. Douglas was given a local anesthetic for the surgery.

Dr. Maurice Whiting, who performed the operation, said Douglas was "resting comfortably."

1949 Rent Act Ruled Illegal and that contract rights were being illegally abridged.

[Judge Neilson stated, however, that Washington had as critical a housing situation as could be found in the Nation and that turmoil would result were rent ceilings removed.—Editors note.]

In the meantime, the attorney said, rent control will continue in effect as far as the housing expediter's office is concerned, with full administration and enforcement.

Should the Supreme Court uphold Judge Shaw's ruling, rent controls would be entirely dead. There is slim possibility that Congress may take any action to bolster the law during the present session. The act continues controls until June 30, 1950.

Judge Shaw said his finding did not question the war powers of Congress, but whether "these war powers may be delegated to States, municipalities or other subdivisions of government."

The opinion said Congress, in the local option clause, "attempted to leave the matter entirely open to arbitrary determination by each State or other subdivision to determine for itself whether or not it wants or needs rent control, and this entirely without rules or guide posts of any kind."

Could Stay Out of Draft

"I can see no difference between this situation and one in which Congress should pass a Selective Service law with the provision that any State which doesn't care to send soldiers may pass a law and say they did not choose to be involved, or an Interstate Commerce Act with the provision that any State which chose not to be governed thereby could declare itself out.

"I can see no reasonable reason to believe that an act of Congress under its war powers can contain any such provisions as might make it inoperative at the option of any or all of the various States or subdivisions of States . . ."

The District judge said a week ago that he considered the local option provision invalid. He said his formal opinion would be issued after a determination as to whether only the objectionable clause, or the entire law, should be thrown out.

"It is my opinion," he wrote today, "that the unconstitutional portions of this Act, if considered with its preamble, greatly outweigh all of the other provisions for decontrol . . .

"It follows that I must necessarily find the entire Act invalid."

The ruling was made in denying a motion by Expediter Woods for an injunction to restrain a cooperative management from evicting 18 tenants who refused to buy stock in the cooperative.

GOP Chiefs Seek Adjournment On July 31

By The Associated Press

House Republicans threatened yesterday to try to force Congress to adjourn on July 31 unless the Democratic leadership sets a definite adjournment date beyond then.

Their plans were disclosed by Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts. He told newsmen he doesn't know of any emergency that might allow the July 31 adjournment date set in the Congressional Reorganization Act to be ignored.

The act says Congress shall quit on that date unless there is a war or emergency, or unless a resolution is passed prolonging the session.

"If there is an emergency, I want to know about it," Martin said. "As far as I know, the only things that have to be done are to pass some appropriation bills still pending."

Martin said he will raise the issue formally Wednesday.

zens and not as members of any particular religious faith.

"I want freedom of religion to prevail in this country. I want no religious prejudice and I want absolute freedom of worship and religious teaching; but at the same time I believe in separation of church and state. I want good will among people of all religions, no matter what their differences may be on matters which are strictly questions to be settled objectively on the basis of what is best for the citizens of our country as a whole.

"My record is that of support of Alfred E. Smith, a Roman Catholic Governor of this State, in every campaign that he made. I spoke from many platforms for him, and I ran the women's work for him when he was candidate for President. I was shocked in that campaign by the extent of what I considered bigotry against the Roman Catholic Church, and I certainly do not wish to encourage anything of that kind.

"I have always made plain my opinion that spiritual and temporal power must not be confused. But in what I have written I have tried to include broad general principles and for that reason I have not specifically spoken for or against any particular bill.

"I have no ill feeling toward any religion or toward any people of high or low estate because they belong to any religious group. I am sure the cardinal has written in what to him seems a Christian and kindly manner and I wish to do the same."

U. S. Population Passes 149 Million Mark

The United States population has passed the 149 million mark, Census Bureau figures indicated today.

The bureau estimated that the population, increasing by nearly 200,000 a month in the first half of 1949, totaled 148,902,000 on June 1. No later figures were given but the rate of increase indicated that the population is now well over 149,000,000.

Since the last census on April 1, 1940, there has been a 13.1 per cent increase in population.

3-Day Week In Pits Called 'Confiscation'

By The Associated Press

John L. Lewis' decree of a three-day week in the coal fields was denounced at a Senate hearing yesterday as "confiscation" of private capital and as "a bold, overt act" to seize control of production and prices.

Love

President George H. Love of the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co. bluntly attacked the abbreviated work week as "confiscation."

Senator Robertson (D., Va.) called it a move to dictate the coal industry's output and prices.

The Virginia Senator and the coal company official aired their views as the Senate Banking Committee, at Robertson's request, opened a full-scale investigation of the coal industry and of Lewis' United Mine Workers Union.

Called Prop for "Machine"

AFL President William Green, a one-time coal miner himself, accused Robertson of using the investigation to "prop up the tottering Byrd political machine in Virginia."

Green said in a statement that the political forces of Senator Byrd (D., Va.) were exploiting the inquiry to bolster the "anti-union issue in the current gubernatorial campaign" in Virginia.

In the Senate hearing, Robertson told the committee that Congress never intended to give labor unions the right to control production "and thereby control prices" when it exempted unions from the Federal anti-trust laws.

Besides the UMW, he cited the CIO Steelworkers, CIO Electrical Workers, CIO Rubber Workers, AFL Teamsters and ohter unions as examples of "possible labor monopolies."

Criticism of the miners' three-day week also came from President Harry H. Moses of the U. S. Steel's coal subsidiaries.

Cautioning that the power wielded by Lewis' miners could inflict "severe damage" on the industry, Moses said the UMW has shown "complete contempt" for laws designed to curb the upsurge of economic power attained by unions.

Moses told the committee:

1. The coal operators did not agree to a three-day week. It was forced upon them.

2. He does not think the three-day week is adequate and doesn't think the miners think so, either—particularly those in debt for a new automobile, house or deep freeze.

To Demand More Money

3. The UMW is going to demand more money, shorter hours and a bigger contribution to the miners' welfare fund in any new contract. The operators now contribute 20 cents a ton to the fund.

4. The three-day week will drive United States Steel to buy coal on the open market at a cost of 20 million dollars to 25 million dollars more than it would cost to produce in its own mines if they could operate on a "normal" week.

5. Other unions are going to seek the same type of treatment and benefits for their members that Lewis has "imposed" on the coal industry.

John D. Battle, executive vice president of the National Coal Association, questioned whether the antitrust laws give any union "the right to control and restrict production."

Battle said in a statement that if a union can dictate how many days an industry can operate, "then we have reached the stage where all of us should understand that we live and function at the discretion of the labor unions."

Senator Robertson told the committee its investigation should determine "the extent and trend of the economic power of unions." He also demanded the full story behind reports that the industry planned to set up a chief negotiator to deal with Lewis on a year-round basis.

Both Moses and Love vigorously denied a published report that northern soft-coal operators were ready to name a "czar" to represent them in labor negotiations.

However, Moses and Love acknowledged that discussions are under way to select a "spokesman" to deal with the union on a full-time basis.

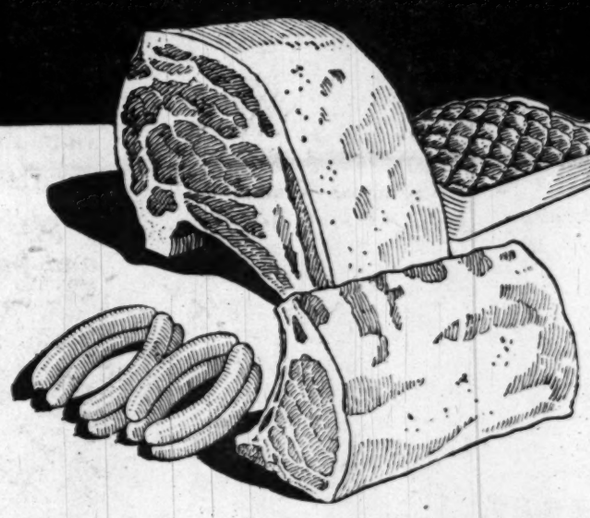
Your MEAT will be there!



Meet the Men who see to it...

"I grow it"

Your meat supply this year, if you are an average American, will be about 146 pounds—up 10 pounds from the prewar average even though our population has increased by 15,000,000 people in the same period of time.

Producing your personal meat supply for one year takes about five acres of land, the long-range planning of farmers, the skills, experience, the care and services of a lot of people in meat packing plants and retail stores.

"I process it"

From farm . . . to plant . . . to store

This farm-to-plant-to-store meat supply service is a good example of American teamwork and efficiency. The average livestock grower raises enough meat for 30 people besides himself. The meat packer processes animals by hundreds instead of by ones and twos. The retailer, in close touch with several competing supply sources, is able to order just the kinds and amounts of meat his customers want. No meat goes to waste.

"I sell it"

These are some reasons why meat moves from farm to table at a lower service cost than almost any other food.

Talks Today May Avert Truck Strike

Last-minute negotiations are expected today in wage disputes between construction contractors and two groups of truck drivers who have scheduled strike meetings for tonight.

Only two weeks ago, the construction industry settled a 39-day strike of AFL carpenters and laborers by granting a 10-cent-an-hour increase which the contractors have used as a pattern for wage offers to other building trades unions.

The AFL groups now threatening to strike are the dump truck drivers and the ready-mix cement truck drivers.

Contractor spokesmen said yesterday a walkout would soon bring to a standstill most public works projects, such as the Dupont Circle underpass, as well as building jobs in their early stages, as the General Accounting Office.

Seek More Than 10c

Wage talks are set for 3 p.m. between the truck driver negotiators and contractors' representatives. The dump truck drivers are scheduled to meet at 8 p.m., followed by the ready-mix cement drivers at 9 p.m. Both were described as "strike meetings" by union officials.

While officials of Truck Drivers Union Local 639, AFL Teamsters, were hopeful last night that a new employers' offer would be made to the dump truck men, settling the dispute, negotiators for the operators said the situation had not changed.

Having turned down a 10-cent-an-hour raise offer from the Dump Truck Operators Association and the Excavators Association, the dump truck drivers have said they would strike at 7 a.m. Wednesday if their demands are not met.

17-Cent Proposition Rejected

Originally, they asked for a 32-cent raise, but their negotiators offered to recommend a 22-cent raise to the union if the employers would agree to that amount. On the other side, employers' negotiators recommended offering the drivers 17 cents more, but this was turned down.

About 200 of the dump truck drivers work for the 15 members of the Dump Truck Operators Association, who draw virtually all the sand and gravel used in local construction. They also remove the earth dug by excavators.

The cement truck drivers, who are demanding a raise of 15 cents, also have permission to strike from the international union. They will decide tonight whether they will strike Wednesday morning with the dump truck men, if demands are not met, according to union spokesmen.

Want Health Insurance

Drivers are now receiving $1.18 to $1.43 an hour, under a contract which expired March 31.

Negotiations in two other buildings trades disagreements are in the offing this week. They involve the structural iron workers and the operating engineers.

The operating engineers, who are not asking for a wage increase but for a health insurance system, will also meet today with builders' representatives. The contractors, who estimate the cost of such a health program as 5 to 6 cents an hour, believe a settlement can be made shortly, but agreement on administering the program may be more difficult, they say.

The structural iron workers, who are still asking for a 25-cent raise over their present $2.75 scale, are expected to resume negotiations shortly after a long period of inactivity.

Falling Tree Traps Two

A 33-year-old woman and her small son were trapped briefly in the cabin of their houseboat on the Anacostia River yesterday when a tree fell from a nearby bank and jammed shut their only exit.

Jay

Mrs. Jean Morgal, who lives on the houseboat moored off the 1700 block of M st. se., telephoned police for aid when she found the cabin door blocked. Firement from No. 7 Truck Company went to work with axes and chopped up the tree after Mrs. Morgal and her son, Jay, 3, had been imprisoned for 15 minutes.

Mrs. Morgal said the tree toppled over and fell across the afterdeck of the houseboat as she was putting her son to bed for his afternoon nap. Although it wedged the cabin door tightly shut, the tree caused no damage to the boat.

While these announcements were stirring the retail circles, manufacturing centers were surprised at a big gain in steel production, operations this week are scheduled at 81.5 per cent of capacity, against 78.3 last week, and only 63 per cent early in June.

At the same time, the Associated Press reported from Detroit that the auto industry was experiencing another week of high volume production, with no easing in sight. Assembly line schedules call for increasing output all through August.

Automotive News, a trade paper, predicted that 678,500 vehicles will be built in August. That would set a new record. In April, 1929, the previous high, the auto factories turned out 621,000.

Many factories are working nine-hour shifts each day and overtime on Saturdays. None are working three shifts as in 1929, to set the record. So far this year more than 3,500,000 cars have been built. The 1929 record appears certain to fall.

Other items affecting business yesterday included:

1. The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported the housewife's marketing dollar on June 15 would buy nearly three cents worth more of goods than it would last August. However, the same June 15 dollar would buy only 58 cents worth of goods when compared with August, 1939.

2. The Federal Reserve Board reported that industrial production in June dropped for the seventh consecutive month, to a 3-year low.

Many economists in Washington think output will go still lower this month, the height of the vacation season. They also expect an autumn upturn.

June production was 3 per cent under May, 13 per cent under last November's peak and 12 per cent under June a year ago.

The Index figure for June was 169 per cent of the 1935-39 average, or 69 per cent above that monthly average. In May it was 174, last November 195 and last June 192.

The report said production of some non-durable goods is on the upswing, but durable items are moving slowly.

3. Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer in Boston began a Nation-wide survey of unemployment, in an effort to learn what the Government can do to stimulate business and provide more jobs.

Gas Company Denies Charge

The Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday denied charges that it spent thousands of dollars last year to advance its appliance business.

The allegations were made by a local group, the Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers, last Monday when it petitioned the Public Utilities Commission to intervene at a hearing Thursday on the company's request for a 7 per cent gas rate increase.

The group further charged that such a rate increase at this time would be "unreasonable and burdensome."

In a detailed answer to the local appliance dealers, filed late yesterday with the PUC, Everett J. Boothby, gas company president, replied that the issue of merchandising gas appliances was not "germane" to the pending case. He stressed that the hearings are concerned only with the demand for rate boosts.

Boothby asserted that the proposed 7 per cent increase is "non-discriminatory, just, reasonable and necessary to provide adequate gas service to the gas consumers of the District of Columbia."

The appliance dealers, represented by George C. Webster, have asked that the rate hearing be postponed until August 15 to permit them to compile further evidence in support of their charges.

Fairfax Camp Again Scene Of Break

Another prisoner, the fourth in three weeks, escaped yesterday from State Convict Camp No. 30 near Fairfax, Va.

Officials managed to hold their own, however, by reporting the recapture on Sunday, in Marion, Va., of a prisoner who had escaped from one of the camp's road gangs Thursday.

Yesterday's escapee was identified as Emory Culberton, 24, who was serving a three-year sentence for housebreaking in Dickerson County.

He reportedly just ran off about 9:15 a. m. from a group of prisoners working on Route 603 in the Senaco section of Fairfax County.

Culberton was described as about 5 feet, 9 inches tall, weighing 132 pounds, with brown hair and eyes and a cut scar on his right temple.

Recaptured Sunday in Marion was George Gilly, 22, who escaped from a road gang in Arlington Thursday.

A 27-year-old cook was sent back to the Alexandria City Jail for six months yesterday after his conviction in Alexandria Police Court of petit larceny in embezzling $23.50 with which he was supposed to free a friend.

Defendant Pernell Davis of 915 Wolfe st., Alexandria, was also held for action of the grand jury on a grand larceny charge for allegedly doing another friend the same way to the tune of $52.38.

Police said that when Davis was released from jail last month, where he had served time for a misdemeanor, two less fortunate friends asked him to pick up the money to pay their fines.

Lugen Hill and Robert Clory, both of 338 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, gave Davis notes to their employers, police said, and Davis was to pick up their back pay.

Davis picked up the pay, police said, but instead of paying the fines he spent it himself. In court yesterday, Davis admitted buying whisky with part of the $53.38 he collected for Clory and losing the rest in a dice game.

He pleaded innocent to the charge of embezzling Hill's $23.50, saying that after he had paid Hill's bills there wasn't enough left to pay his fine. Davis, admitted, however, keeping the $11 that was left over.

RFC Files Suit Against Distillery

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday filed suit in Alexandria Federal Court to recover $370,468.75 which it claims it is owed by the Belle Meade Distilling Corp., located near Front Royal, Va.

The suit stated that during the war the Defense Supplies Corp., whose functions have now been assumed by RFC, bought more than a million gallons each of ethyl alcohol and high wine from the company.

In 1946, however, OPA fixed the price of the products at figures lower than the Government had paid.

RFC said the distilling company has refused to refund the difference, which is the amount sought by the court action.

Slot Court Test Studied

Colonial Beach, Va., July 25 (AP).—Colonial Beach churches are considering a court test of legality of slot machines just off the Virginia shore of the Potomac River.

The machines are operating on pierheads over Maryland water on the theory that Maryland owns the Potomac to the low water mark on the Virginia shore.

Dr. J. L. Carrick, Baptist minister, said today an effort will be made to organize members of his church with a view to bringing a test case.

The Rev. Lance K. Knowles, Methodist minister, said several church and civic groups are studying the matter and will meet later to discuss it.

Meanwhile Governor Tuck said he has received no complaint of violation of the State's anti-gambling laws at Colonial Beach.

The Governor added that all he knows about the reported operation of slot machines on piers extending across the Virginia-Maryland boundary—low water line on Virginia's side of the Potomac River—is what he had read in the newspapers.

The State's policy of relentless warfare on gambling at summer resorts and elsewhere has not been abated, he said.

The Governor's remarks were made at his press conference today when he was asked to comment on reports of operation of the slot machines at Colonial Beach piers.

Appearance of the machines followed legalization of slot machines in Charles County, Md.—just across the Potomac from Colonial Beach—in a local option referendum June 21. The machines on the piers extending from the Colonial Beach side beyond the low water mark are licensed in Charles County.

Mrs. Beck on Stand

Sordid Love Unfolded in Hearts Trial

New York, July 25 .—Mrs. Martha Beck today told a life story of sordid love and family conflict in her efforts to escape the electric chair on a lonely hearts murder charge.

At the same time, she said she didn't know whether she committed the slaying with which she is charged.

The 200-pound, 29-year-old defendant testified at her own request in her first-degree murder trial for the killing of Mrs. Janet Fay, 66, Albany, N. Y., widow.

Before she took the stand she kissed her codefendant, Raymond Fernandez, 34.

She was born in Milton, Fla., May 6, 1920, and "as long as I can remember there was a conflict between my mother and father."

Her mother, Mrs. Julia Seabrook of Pensacola, Fla., was absent today.

When she (Mrs. Beck) was 13, she was the victim of two incestuous attacks by her brother which "have been preying on my mind ever since," she said. Her mother kept here in virtual seclusion and she told her mother "you're driving me crazy."

Mrs. Beck's mother replied: "What do you mean driving you crazy—you've been crazy all your life."

Her mother blocked her ambition to become a mortician and she became a nurse in a Pensacola, Fla., hospital in 1939. Once while in nurse's training she became ill and fell. "Undoubtedly I must have struck my head."

She was graduated as a nurse in 1941.

In 1943, in California, she took sleeping tablets "to combat suicide" because "life was not worth living; I'd rather be dead than continue arguing with my mother every day of my life."

The plump witness testified to abnormal sex practices and said she suffered from amnesia.

She told of a nurse "who played a practical joke on me," and "sent her name to a lonely hearts correspondence club." She filled out an application she received, and in April, 1947, met Fernandez.

Wytheville, Va., July 25 (AP).—Authorities today hoped a pretty, brown-eyed blonde "can fill us in" on the past life of Ernest I. Torrence, 57-year-old accused "lonely hearts" victimizer of women.

The woman, who gave her name as Mildred Martha Dearmond, 28, of Ashland, Ky., came to Wytheville yesterday, and said she was Torrence's common-law wife.

Virginia State police locked her up on a charge of fraudulent conversion issued by authorities in Allegheny County, Pa.

Torrence is charged with fraudulent conversion of $14,000 in that State on the complaint of a Pittsburgh woman who says he ran away with her life savings after courting her daughter.

In Virginia, a Carroll County woman says Torrence took $2500 of her money for investment in a "Florida land deal" after he had promised to marry her.

The Dearmond woman told authorties she and Torrence lived in Lansing, where she was a waitress and Torrence a truck driver, moved to Detroit, and then to places in Texas, and to Florida.

Disclaiming any connection with Torrence's alleged activity as a Lothario who contacted prospective women swindle victims through the mails, Mildred noted:

"He used to leave me alone a lot of the time."

Widow, 53, Held As Police Probe 7 Arsenic Deaths

Poitiers, France, July 25 (U.P.)—A 53-year-old widow was held today while police prepared to exhume the bodies of seven of her relatives and friends who have died in her home in nearby Loudon since 1948.

The exhumations were ordered after police learned that the body of her second husband who died in October, 1947, contained 19.45 miligrams of arsenic. A lethal dose is 12 miligrams.

The widow, Marie Besnard, was not charged formally.

Investigation of the deaths began in May when a roomer told police he was present when wealthy farmer Leon Besnard died and that his last words were, "I have been poisoned."

Veterans 52-20 Pay Program Expires

The 52-20 program under which 8,770,000 World War II veterans have drawn $3,600,000,000 unemployment pay expired at midnight last night.

Efforts to extend the legislation have failed although the Senate Labor Committee approved it last Friday. Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) chairman of the House Veterans Committee, said yesterday it doesn't stand a chance.

Race Driver Impaled on Plank

Yakima, Wash., July 25 (AP).—A splintered 10-foot length of a 2 by 4 plank was driven through the body of a Cornelius, Oreg., racing car driver yesterday when his car plunged through a fence at the Central Washington Fairgrounds.

Four doctors had to saw away more than 4 feet of the plank on each side of the driver, Allen E. Hobson, 24, before he could be placed in an ambulance.

The huge splinter pierced the left side of his abdomen and rammed more than 7 feet through his body.

His condition was reported critical today.

Cohen Case Witness Missing

Los Angeles, July 25 (U.P.).—A key witness in the gangland ambush of Mickey Cohen is missing, State Attorney General Fred N. Howser said today.

Howser said he fears the witness may have met with foul play.

The witness is Edward Johnson, San Diego, Calif., sporting goods dealer who sold one of the shotguns used to blast the 35-year-old Cohen and three other persons as they left a night club early Wednesday.

Another development was the surrender of Anthony Trombino, 29-year-old former Kansas City hoodlum named by the attorney general as a suspect in the attempted assassination of Cohen.

Trombino was booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill after he had given a two-hour statement.

Other developments included a report by a grand jury spokesman that State Agent Harry Cooper, wounded with Cohen, was guarding the mobster as long ago as last February.

Pushing Baby Carriage While Drunk Costs $4

London, July 25 (AP).—Mrs. Jean Donaldson, 32, was fined 20 shillings ($4) today for pushing a baby carriage while drunk.

ers have been daily and systematically defrauded," Hogan said.

He said the payoff number was computed from the noon bond sales and the Cincinnati Clearing House figures and consisted of three digits. The first two consisted of the second and third digits of the bond sales totals in New York and the third of the second digit in the Cincinnati figures.

The rigging worked this way, the District Attorney explained. Tiplitz would go to the office of Kean, Taylor and Co., a brokerage house in Newark with a branch on Wall Street, and get the noon bond figures.

He then would phone Zwillman at the ring's headquarters and give him these figures, Hogan charged. Tiplitz would check the numbers played for the day and pick the one with the smallest payoff. This number he would phone to Cincinnati in code and this was the number announced by the clearing house, Hogan said.

Hogan said that when Tiplitz was arrested he had $6000 in cash and policy records, which are being examined.

He said that charges of conspiracy and conspiracy to contrive a lottery would be filed against members of the ring, and that evidence would be presented at once to a grand jury.

A Family of 4,200,000 members celebrates its 90th Anniversary

July 26, 1949 . . . today is the 90th birthday of The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, a mutual organization which has pioneered some of the most important life insurance developments in this country.

Again and again, throughout the nine decades of its business history, The Equitable has not hesitated to break with tradition . . . to find new ways and means of providing more adequately for the changing security needs of its membership.

That a major portion of today's accepted pattern of life insurance protection was first introduced by The Equitable Society is a matter of record.

Initiative and leadership build confidence . . . particularly when they exist in the organization that works for you. The justification and maintenance of this confidence impel the management of The Equitable to rededicate its energies, resources, and purposes to further accomplishments in the interest of its members.

For . . . it is the 4,200,000 thrifty American men and women banded together for mutual protection who constitute The Equitable—and for whom The Equitable exists.

Thomas I. Parkinson President

The Equitable's Assured Home Ownership Plan, an innovation in mortgage financing within the past forty years, is today protecting thousands against the two greatest hazards of home ownership . . . death and hard times. It creates over the years an ever-increasing fund for emergencies and at the same time provides a home free and clear should death take the breadwinner before the mortgage is paid off.

The payment of death claims, within 24 hours of proof of death, was initiated by The Equitable Society some 80 years ago. This procedure was, at that time, considered unprecedented . . . but has since become standard practice

Group Insurance, originated by The Equitable Society in 1911, has so clearly demonstrated its value in serving the interests of both employee and employer that today it protects approximately one-third of all workers in the United States.

Following World War I, The Equitable was the first company to pay all war death claims in full. Again, after World War II, The Equitable Society was the leader in initiating the payment of war death claims despite policy restrictions that absolved the company from any obligation to pay these claims.

In 1945, a study of the risk involved in airplane travel enabled The Equitable to announce the withdrawal of all air passenger travel restrictions and penalties . . . a move which was followed by many other major life insurance companies.

The Equitable Society was among the first to establish special training Schools for life insurance underwriters. Also, the Chartered Life Underwriting movement, fostering professional standards for life insurance agents, was pioneered by The Equitable . . . and the first Chartered Life Underwriter graduate was an Equitable representative.

Japan Coast Alerted for Typhoon

Tokyo, (Tuesday), July 26 (U.P.)—The entire coast of Honshu, main Japanese home island, was alerted for heavy weather today as the typhoon "Hester" howled across Iwo Jima and headed for Japan.

The United States Navy reported the typhoon Gloria, which resiously damaged Okinawa Saturday, had hit and virtually immobilized the crowded Communist-held metropolis of Shanghai.

Streets were as deep as four feet with water.

The Navy said several inches of water covered the floors of the United States Consulate in Shanghai yesterday. Lights and communications were out and messages sent by an emergency generator said damage to the consulate property was "extensive but not serious."

[Far East command headquarters raised the Okinawa death toll to two. An unnamed 7-year-old American girl was killed outright during the storm. Filimeno Capoy, a Filipino construction worker, died yesterday of injuries. Two American children are listed among the seriously injured. Nine Air Force and five Army enlisted men suffered minor injuries.]

Air Force weather observers said the typhoon Hester passed over Iwo Jima last night, sweeping the tiny island with winds in excess of 70 miles an hour. The typhoon was expected to reach Japan late Tuesday afternoon.

So far, weathermen said, there was no report of damage done to American installations on Iwo.

Charles Krause, 25, Baltimore, Md., the first person to reach Tokyo from Okinawa since the typhoon struck Saturday, told of the devastation.

Krause who estimated damage to United States military installations on Okinawa at 20 million dollars.

During the storm, Krause took shelter in a pre-fabricated house occupied by Lieut. Col. Walter F. Dix, Twentieth Air Force communications officer. Dix's home was near Kadena air field.

"I watched the roof of a nearby mess hall blow for two city blocks after the wind wrenched it loose," Krause said.

"The patio of an officers' club began to crumble, and finally collapsed. Part of the roof of an adjoining building blew off while 60 persons crouched inside. The kitchen roof of another mess hall blew off, completely smashing the wall of the transient officers' headquarters."

Krause said only 5 per cent of the Army installations on the island were typhoon-proof. The rest were quonset huts or standard pre-fab houses of plywood.

At 12:34 p. m. Saturday the fourteenth Weather Squadron took a reading of 135 miles per hours before their wind recorder was blown away. They estimated that subsequent gusts reached as high as 170 miles per hour.

In addition, the Army radio station was destroyed and three-quarters of the general hospital between Kadena and Naha was partially damaged. No patients were hurt.

60 Pickets at White House

A letter urging release of Larry Gara, Quaker teacher imprisoned for counseling a conscientious objector who refused to register for the draft, was presented to the White House yesterday.

At the same time, about 60 pickets, representing various religious groups, marched in front of the White House carrying placards urging the President to "Free Imprisoned War Objectors."

The letter, signed by 400 pastors and church members, voiced support of a statement on the Gara case adopted by the two Philadelphia Yearly Meetings of the Religious Society of Friends.

"Religious freedom, if it means anything at all, must include the right to advise our members to follow the dictates of their consciences, even if they are led thereby to violate the Selective Service Act of 1948 or other man-made laws," the statement said.

Gara, a member of the faculty of Bluffton College, Ohio Mennonite Institution, was convicted in May of violating the Selective Service Act for advising student Charles Rickert to "stand on your principles," after Rickert had decided not to register for the draft. The letter to the President said that Rickert and Gara had never met at the time Rickert made the decision.

The demonstration was sponsored by the Catholic Worker, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, Peacemakers, the War Registers League and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Among the signers of the letter were Kermit Eby, research and education editor of the CIO; John Haynes Holmes, former pastor of the Community Church in New York; Reinhold Niebuhr and D. Elton Trueblood.

Truman On Home Rule

President Truman sent to Capitol Hill yesterday precisely the kind of message on home rule for the District that this newspaper has been urging him to send for the last two years. It is a full, complete and effective indorsement of the Kefauver bill, coupled with a cogent request for its enactment at the present session of Congress. The message went straight to Speaker Rayburn as a sign that the President expects the House leadership to take a hand in rescuing the bill from the obstructionists in the House District Committee. That will certainly be necessary if the House is to be permitted to vote on this vital nonpartisan measure before adjournment.

"It is little short of fantastic," the President wrote to Mr. Rayburn, "that the Congress of the United States should—as it now does—devote a substantial percentage of its time to acting as a city council for the District of Columbia." The Kefauver bill, as Mr. Truman points out, will relieve Congress of most of that burden without any surrender of its constitutional powers. In addition, it will restore local suffrage and home rule to this politically starved community and give it an efficient and economical government organization for the first time in many decades.

In view of the nonsense that is being broadcast about the founding fathers making home rule impossible here, it is good to hear President Truman quote Madison's well-known promise to the people of the District. "A municipal legislature for local purposes, derived from their own suffrages," Madison said, "will, of course, be allowed them." What is inconceivable is that even today the hindsight of some members of Congress as to the necessity of an elected local government here is not as good as was Madison's foresight more than a century and a half ago.

The effect of the President's message is to revive hope for action on the home-rule bill within the next few weeks—a hope that had been almost crushed by the delaying tactics of Representative Harris in conducting the hearings. It is a signal for the forces behind the home-rule bill to mobilize every resource at their command. Now the President is leading the home-rule parade. With his sponsorship, courageous leadership on both sides of the aisle in the House, and general community support, the measure can scarcely fail.

Plane Talk

What is most becoming about the Russians is their modesty. Lieut. Gen. Vassily Stalin, son of the generalissimo, has bashfully admitted that Soviet pilots fly "farther, faster and higher" than any others in the world. With a proper filial respect, he attributes this success to the fact that there is not a single Soviet plane which does not embody the suggestions or guidance of Premier Stalin. These reluctant admissions are quite understandable now that the Russians have grudgingly acknowledged responsibility for most of the important discoveries, inventions and ideas of history. The confusing thing about the "farther, faster and higher" statement is that it conflicts with claims already discreetly advanced by our own Air Force, which itself is no mean hand at modesty.

Seriously, despite the recently noted Russian advances in jet planes, there is no reason to believe that technically the Russians have outstripped the United States. Probably the Stalin claims must be put down to a high-flying imagination. There is, however, one point on which it would be well not to discount Soviet aviation. That is in the matter of interceptors for long-range bombers. Since this country repeatedly has advertised what its strategy would be in case of war, the Russians would be foolish if they were not concentrating on countermeasures against strategic bombing.

In this connection it is pertinent to consider the complaint of Gen. Jacob L. Devers about the neglect of tactical air support for the Army—a point on which the Russians are strong. Strategic bombers are an important and necessary ingredient of American preparedness, but strategic bombing can be a pernicious influence if it detracts from other essential missions of the Air Force. A case could be made, for example, to prove that the Navy's efforts to edge into strategic bombing have caused it to give less attention to the fundamental job of protection of surface vessels. Army commanders are acid in their comment about the lack of Air Force interest in support of land operations.

One solution proposed to correct the deficiency is to give the Army control of tactical aviation. That would be undesirable, because it would in effect create another air arm and undo unification. But the separate Air Force was not created to act as a lone wolf. Certainly one of its most basic responsibilities is to consider the Army's needs and participate in joint training with the foot soldiers who still will have the dirty end of any war.

Arming The World

At the General Assembly last year in Paris Mr. Marshall was besieged with requests for arms from almost every nation in attendance. This is a measure of the uncertainty everywhere on this troubled planet—an uncertainty arising out of the combination of imperialism and international conspiracy directed from Moscow. It is obvious, however, that this country cannot and should not arm everybody professing anti-communism. Yet that seems to be the object of the military assistance program which has just been submitted to Congress. Arms (and/or military missions) would be scattered all over the world, with results that would aggravate militarism at home and abroad, as well as imperil the general peace. It looks like the handiwork of the National Security Council rather than that of the State Department. And in the administration of MAP a sort of military ECA, with missions fanning out everywhere, would be established—a sort of bureaucratic octopus of uniforms.

To be sure, an arms policy is an inescapable instrument of the United States as the leader of the free world. But is this a policy? We think not. It is in our opinion a shrapnel program based on the fallacy that you can shoot communism and adumbrated so vaguely as to insure the implementation of the Atlantic Pact. We feel the Administration is saying to Congress, "If you agree to this, you will get that." In other words, it is a hodgepodge, not a policy. The Administration has asked for something perilously close to a blank check. There would be $1.4 billion of new money, plus surplus marked down to nothing, and an uncertain amount of contractual authority, i.e., permits to foreign nations to buy arms privately. In this respect a blank check is dynamite, for an arms policy to be constructive must be judiciously administered, and experience hitherto has shown little wisdom in the peddling of American arms. The American security can be endangered as well as protected by the way arms are disposed of. To arm some nations would be to pass arms on to the Communists, as has already been demonstrated in the case of Nationalist China. Arms could keep juntas and tyrants in power, and so clamp their oppression upon the people, as would be the case in respect of some of our American neighbors. Arms could endanger rather than keep the peace on the Russian border, as might happen by overdoing assistance to Russia's immediate neighbors. There is no guaranty against all this foolishness in the Military Assistance Program as presented to Congress.

The program without doubt will get the careful scrutiny it deserves. For our part we think that the Senate should restrict itself to the program as it affects the powers which are now bound together in the Atlantic Pact. And in this respect Senator Vandenberg expresses the thinking that marked our own approach to the Atlantic Pact. He has called for stop-gap aid—presumably to meet specific situations, as, e.g., in Korea and the remaining obligation for Greece and Turkey—till common defense plans have been made by the signers of the Atlantic Treaty. These plans are organizational, and are provided for under Article 9. The need to make haste slowly in respect of Europe is imperative in the light of postwar experience with the Europeans—their failure to follow through in the matter of promises first of allegiance to freer and nondiscriminatory trade and then of continental integration.

Witness No. 8

The policies and procedures made familiar but infamous at home by the House Committee on Un-American Activities have now been introduced on an international stage by a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee under the directorship of Senator McCarran. Somebody identified only as Witness No. 8, who might have been an employe of the United Nations, a Communist stooge or a sideshow barker at the World's Fair, told Mr. McCarran's subcommittee that the United Nations Secretariat is terrorized by Communist agents and that Secretary General Trygve Lie ought to be ousted. Apparently without further inquiry, the subcommittee made these sensational charges public.

The best editorial comment on the matter has come from a distinguished former newspaperman, Byron Price, now Acting Secretary General of the U. N. "This is the nuttiest story I have heard yet," said Mr. Price. "I am in a position to know that the charges relating to the administration policies of Secretary General Trygve Lie and personnel policies of the United Nations are fantastically untrue. I am sure that no fair-minded person will attach significance to the statement of a mysterious, so-called 'official' who attempts wholesale character assassination of his colleagues but refuses to give his name."

Mr. Price is, indeed, in a position to know what he is talking about. He is, in addition, known for sobriety and candor, and he hides behind no mask of anonymity. We hope he is right that no fair-minded person will attach significance to the unchecked assertion of Witness No. 8. But very serious significance must be attached to the conduct of the subcommittee which made itself a sounding board for these assertions. This is not only unfair play to an international organization which has honored the United States by making its headquarters here; it is also mischievous interference in an area respecting which a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee is wholly without competence.

The United States does not lack an appropriate voice in the United Nations and can make fitting representations if it is dissatisfied with the administrative policies of the secretariat. But it cannot deal in terms of irresponsible vilification without dooming the U. N. to dissolution.

Word To The Churches

The groundwork for an unholy sectarian war has been laid by the attacks and recriminations that have been uttered in connection with the aid-to-education bill before the House of Representatives. Charge and countercharge have echoed from Sunday pulpits. Obviously if this chain reaction is to continue, the churches and their leading figures will be drawn into a free-for-all squabble that will gravely retard the cause of Christian brotherhood and spiritual growth.

Mrs. Roosevelt in reply to Cardinal Spellman has defended her own record by citing the work she did for the late Al Smith when he ran for the New York governorship and later when his presidential campaign provoked a bigoted anti-Catholic crusade. In this matter the former First Lady does not need any defense. The record plainly attests her lack of anti-Catholicism. There was never any warrant in attaching this label either to her or to anybody else who has taken a stand against the use of public funds for parochial schools. Some churchmen may be tempted to prolong the controversy as a means of drawing attention to themselves or their beliefs. Let them, however, be warned: in so doing they will be doing the cause of religion a profound disservice.

The God-fearing peoples of the earth need desperately to stand together in resisting the loss of faith, the spread of terrorism, and the worship of wit and power at the expense of character and moral conviction that are characteristic of our age. The apostles of atheism and totalitarianism would like nothing better than to see the churches of the United States at each other's throats. That is another reason to avoid it. The great majority of Americans of all sects and creeds, we are confident, want to see their churches stand above the battles of politics and aloof from any kind of sectarian fighting. They should insist on it. They cannot afford to have the great message of the brotherhood of man lost to sight in an undignified orgy of name-calling. Nothing is likely to do more harm to the spiritual welfare of the Nation and to the churches themselves.

Disturbing Diarist

The Five Per Cent Club seems not to have have been such an exclusive organization after all, but, as in the case of that other organization lately influential hereabouts, the Communist Party, a large portion of the membership appears to have labored, so to speak, underground. Such, at any rate, is the popular deduction from the news that Senator Hoey's subcommittee has now in its possession a diary kept by the indiscreet Mr. James V. Hunt, and in which is recorded in some detail his adventures in that twilight world, doubtless peculiar to this Capital, where the arts of business (mostly official business) and of pleasure are delightfully combined. To put it more plainly, Mr. Hunt, as it seems, was in the habit of going to cocktail parties and chatting about such matters as Government contracts and fees. He was also, it is said, in the habit of dictating detailed accounts of these conversations—including names, addresses and such sums of money as might have been mentioned—to his secretary.

Mr. Hunt is evidentially a man of considerable verbal fluency as well as of highly sociable instincts, for the diary is supposed to cover a thousand pages and to contain the names of a good many important personages, including Government officials, members of the military establishment, and members of Congress. It is perhaps not surprising, then, if many residents of the city, who because of the recent heat wave or for some other reason have found it difficult to sleep, have whiled away the wakeful hours trying to remember where they had met the garrulous and gregarious Mr. Hunt and what they might have said to him.

To be sure, a mere social acquaintance with Mr. Hunt, or the inclusion of one's name in his diary, is not, as Senator Hoey has been at pains to point out, even prima facie evidence of any impropriety in the matter of Government contracts. Senator Hoey has also indicated that the name will not be divulged until there has been a careful investigation, and not even then if it should appear that the person involved is innocent. This, of course, is no more than justice and common sense; for to permit the character of public officials to be publicly impeached on such unsupported evidence as a personal diary would be a dangerous and demoralizing business and might open the way to all sorts of intimidations that might aggravate the very evil Mr. Hoey presumably is trying to correct.

WITH WHAT SIMPLICITY

With what simplicity, the land
Performs the sacred rite of death.
The primrose gently folds its hand,
The weary bird unbinds its breath.

The old leaves crumble in their sleep—
Somewhere a wood-voice tapers out!
The feeble cricket soon will keep
An ultimate, grey hush about.

And none shall come to mourn the tree
Still etched against the evening sky.
Only the dusk, on bended knee,
Will count the grass-blades when they die.

Music Center

Without vision, a people will perish.

The Nation's Capital should rise to the challenge of Koussevitsky's plan of a national music center and work for its realization.

If Washington had a citizens' government instead of the three tired men in the District Building, they would, of course, accept the challenge.

The only alternative left is to form a citizens' committee to do the job. On such a committee along with officials of the National Symphony should be the leading figures in the city's music life and representatives from all other walks of life.

The first step would be to invite Koussevitsky to work his music here as he did in Boston. Secondly, amalgamating with the Baltimore Symphony would provide an orchestra of 110 and the base to support it.

"Planes And Music"

Your editorials usually are such masterpieces of fearless logic that I was truly shocked to find "Planes and Music" on your editorial page of July 19.

The "commonsense compromise" suggested by your writer very clearly displays his unfamiliarity with air traffic and particularly with transport planes. He apparently is entirely unmindful that it is considered good form for planes to land into the wind.

Furthermore, he obviously has not given much consideration to the difficulties that would be encountered by a transport pilot attempting to land into a south wind on the north-south runway and, coincidentally, trying to refrain from intruding on any passage of that "delicate aria." He, according to your expert, should fly down the Virginia side of the Potomac.

To execute your pattern, two extremely dangerous steep banks—a left and a right—at low altitudes, would be required for the approach to the north-south runway.

J. T. BULMAN.

Washington.

Editor's Note: The Virginia-side approach was discussed with the manager of the National Airport before the editorial was written. He indicated that a substitute approach might be worked out for use during concerts.

Antitrust Enforcement

Again your paper is to be complimented on the splendid and appropriate cartoon of July 18, "You're Trying to Destroy Free Enterprise." Just a year or two ago a similar cartoon appeared titled "I Seem to Be Getting Smaller and Smaller," and this received Nation-wide publicity.

There is only one criticism we could have of the cartoon, and that is where the monopolist is holding the sheet with the words "New Antitrust Laws Under Consideration." It would be our opinion that this could read "All Out Investigation by the Congress of Failure to Enforce Antitrust Laws." We believe if this was done by the Congress there would be crying from the heavens by monopoly, "You're Trying to Destroy Free Enterprise."

We were amazed within the past week when one of the President's economic advisers, in his appearance before the subcommittee of the House Judiciary recommended the repeal of the Fair Trade Acts (Tydings-Miller Law). We were also more than surprised when he stated there was need for a clarification of the Robinson-Patman Act, and we were further surprised when he stated that he was shocked at the recent decision of the Federal Court against a major oil company in their attempt to justify their actions with a special price to a few of their customers, stating such price was given in good faith.

Independent business has a complete understanding and knowledge of the present antitrust laws and we see no justifiable reason at this time for any new antitrust laws to be under consideration, or any need for streamlining the laws to bring them up to date, or any need for clarification. On the other hand, if independent business is to remain an important part of our economy, then it should be the all-out action of the Congress to find out why the antitrust laws have not been enforced. By granting necessary appropriations, Congress should insist that the present laws be administered without fear or favor, and add to the present laws severe penalties (not fines) where violations occur.

GEORGE J. BURGER,
Vice President, National Federation of Independent Business.

Formula For Guidance

In answer to the question in Malvina Lindsay's column of July 14, parents must indeed develop a "tremendous interest in improving themselves" before directly trying to mold their children's views.

The self-improvement necessary is irrelevant of books; the only prerequisite is a desire to reason, and thus to elevate oneself to a positive state of maturity. The ability to look within oneself for motives is universal; what must be routed is the awareness of need to do so!

Hazy surface emotion should not be considered sufficient cause for any act. The self-improvement necessary is simply attained by looking within oneself for virtue and to the best of one's ability living honestly, strictly within one's conscience.

Conventional success in outward living can be attained more surely when we constantly heed the tried saying: "Unto thine own self be true."

Point of No Return by Marquand, as sugar coated as easy reading demands, yet written by an outwardly successful sophisticate, holds modern proof of failure to attain happiness when outward success was gained in defiance of inner need.

Once the parent has developed himself to a maturity where he can independently of aggressive social forces decide for himself what brings him the most enduring satisfaction, what more inevitable than that he guide his children to constructively accomplish the same peace of mind for themselves?

Home Rule First

For some time I have been endeavoring to get some reasonable explanation from those who say that the bills for District home rule now before Congress would not give "real home rule" because of the "strings" which Congress would still constitutionally hold and, so it is alleged, would be continually pulling this way and that.

I could understand, though disagreeing, if this were just a defeatist doctrine that no "real home rule" is possible so long as the District remains under Federal authority. But the mystery has been deepened by recent concessions by some who I had supposed were against local suffrage in itself, but who now come out positively to say that home rule would be good if national representation were obtained first.

If we did succeed in getting national representation first, might not these people then discover that our representation in Congress would have too little effect in this respect and that home rule would be nearly as "unreal" and objectionable to them as it would have been before? If, as they seem to think, we must have our full-powered spokesmen at the Capitol to trade and maneuver with the hundred-times-as-many spokesmen from the States in order to stall off interference or to act directly in the ways the people of the District want their local affairs run, that would be a pretty poor sort of home rule, too.

If we go rationally at the problem of having Congress let us run our own affairs, we might find the solution in the combination of well-drafted basic legislation and proper care to foster good habits of carrying it out on the part of both local citizens and Congress. There are even reasons for thinking the presence of our Representatives and a Senator or two from the District might interfere with such habits by providing channels through which local citizens as well as Congress could by-pass or appeal from action of the properly constituted local government. Neither national representation nor the lack of it is automatically a help to home rule; but so long as we lack it, the more need we have for increased powers in a local government which Congress can constitutionally permit us to elect.

The first step in making good home-rule habits possible for all concerned is to set up a local government with fuller powers than the present one, and with the prestige of being responsible in good American fashion to the people who are being governed. The second step will be up to the local electorate, and the third step will be up to those elected and to the appointive officials responsible to them, to do so good a job that there is no just reason for going over their heads.

The pending bills do remarkably well by the principle that the ordinary actions of the local government should provide as little direct invitation to congressional action as possible. The Kefauver bill especially permits not only so-called municipal ordinance but also appropriations to be passed with no necessary action by Congress, and furthermore eases the passage of other local legislation by requiring only a lay-over for possible veto, and not any positive action by Congress to approve them.

All who are not really afraid to join with their neighbors in the responsibilities of local self-government should get over any wishful thinking that national representation, however desirable in itself, is the panacea for any shortcomings or hazards of local self-rule and therefore would need to be obtained first. The only way, as Messrs. Auchincloss, Kefauver, and their collaborators have kindly opened it for us, is to meet the problem of "real home rule" directly and separately, by a well-drafted bill and then a united and loyal will to make it work.

"Frank Murphy"

Why, in your July 20 editorial on Justice Murphy, do you refer to the court's opinion in the Terminiello case as "notorious?" Should not devotees of democracy defend the opportunity of unpopular minorities to engage in free speech? I suggest also there is no necessary dichotomy between legalism and humanitarianism.

Czech Warning

THE GREATEST single victory of Russian communism since the end of World War II was the conquest of Czechoslovakia. The destruction of the Roman Catholic Church now being systematically carried out is the final move in a campaign planned step by step in Moscow.

The West will ignore the object lesson of Czechoslovakia at its peril. Perhaps the best analysis of the downfall of the once democratic Czech republic has just been published and it is "must" reading for everyone, but especially for those who take the complacent view that the cold war is subsiding.

The author is Ivo Duchacek, now in this country, who was formerly in the Czech diplomatic service. After the liberation in 1945, he was chairman of the foreign relations committee of the Czech Parliament. His memorandum, called "The Strategy of Communist Infiltration: The Case of Czechoslovakia," is being circulated among top-policy planners here. It was put out by the Yale Institute of International Studies.

CZECH democrats trying to resist Communist infiltration had a feeling of being abandoned by the West, Duchacek says. After the war ended, Great Britain and the United States seemed to have no positive policy. American forces in Europe were reduced so rapidly that American power appeared negligible.

Just across Czechoslovakia's border was the might of the Soviet Union, which seemed to be expanding without any restraints imposed on it. Czechs schooled in the Communist underground during the war and in Moscow were taking over key positions in the country in accord with a detailed plan worked out long in advance.

This came on top of the tragic blunders made by the Western Allies as the war was drawing to an end; conspicuously, the command to stop the victorious Western armies short of Prague, leaving the capital to be "liberated" by the Russians. And always in the background was the bitter memory of Britain's appeasement of Nazi Germany at Munich.

"It was Soviet power on the one hand and the lack of an active Western policy and of cohesion among Western European nations on the other," Duchacek writes, "that were mainly responsible for the self-assurance of the Communist minority and for the feeling of helpless isolation on the democratic side. The sharp contrast between the active influence of the East and the hesitant policy of the West in Europe was not only the background, but the chief cause of Communist success in Czechoslovakia, of the number of opportunist fellow-travelers and of the democratic defeats. The checkmating of Soviet power thus seems the first condition of an awakening of democratic courage and resistance in Europe."

This, of course, has a direct bearing on what Congress does or does not do about President Truman's request for arms for western Europe. If, as some Senators insisted in the debate on ratification, the Atlantic Pact must not mean even a moral obligation, then in both Western and Eastern Europe they will take it as a sign that while America's intentions are good, there is no real determination to back up those intentions.

THOSE WHO believe in Western democracy fail to realize, Duchacek points out, that communism is a revolutionary conspiracy employing every kind of stratagem, legal and illegal, to overthrow democracy. Communists in Czechoslovakia's coalition government after the war used their control of the ministries of interior and agriculture to consolidate their power. The author emphasizes that in no European country was the Communist Party able to gain a majority in free elections.

Peasants who did not vote for the Communists out of fear of the ministry of interior, voted for them because of the ministry of agriculture's promises. These promises doubled and tripled those of the Agrarian Party. As one democratic leader bitterly expressed it:

"We have asked our peasants to vote for the philosophical heritage of Thomas Masaryk. They have voted for fertilizers instead."

Duchacek closes with a final note of warning to the West: "It is up to the Western world to develop a courageous political and economic program, a daring program of social reform... It must be borne in mind that Communist seduction operates at its best when obvious social injustice or lack of respect for basic human rights is met by a negative or faltering attitude."

The Eighty-first Congress has ignored or sidetracked a long list of reforms called for by the party in power. Here, too, the world is watching to see whether good intentions have any relation to practical performance.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Preface To Military Aid

AS WE prepare to discuss military aid, we may say, I think, that our first and most important problem is to decide between two kinds of commitments. The first is what territory we shall commit ourselves to defend. The second is what territory we shall only guarantee against aggression.

Lippmann

BOTH KINDS of commitment are backed by the determination to wage war against an aggressor. But the difference between them is of great practical and strategic importance. Thus, if Panama were attacked, we would make a serious stand in the Canal Zone and we would also fight a general war. But if west Berlin, which is covered by the Atlantic Pact, were attacked, we would make only a token defense in Berlin as we mobilized to fight a general war. In Panama we are committed to a guarantee plus a pledge to defend. In west Berlin we are committed to a guarantee without that pledge.

In meeting our obligations under the Atlantic Pact, we have to decide what we shall treat like Panama and what like west Berlin. These are hard decisions. But in the conduct of a great coalition they are unavoidable.

IDEALLY, of course, we would wish to give every country not only a guarantee against aggression but a reliable defense against invasion. At times when our rhetoric has been exuberant, we have seemed to be telling the world that we meant to create local defenses everywhere to "contain" the Soviets at every point where they might move in. But as a matter of fact, it is quite impossible to do that.

If it were attempted seriously, it would mean that we had committed immense forces all around the periphery of the Soviet Union—from Japan and China through Southeast Asia and the Middle East to the Balkans, Germany, and Scandinavia. This would be a method of strategic suicide. For while we were committing our resources around the borderland, the Russians would retain their whole army as a mass of maneuver. We, on the other hand, would have our forces earmarked for local defense, frozen, dispersed, and largely useless. By undertaking to defend too much territory, we should have impaired fatally the effectiveness of our guarantee to go to war if any country becomes the victim of military aggression.

WE MUST NOT think, therefore, that the allocation of military aid is like the allocation of Marshall aid. In theory at least, we have tried to allocate enough dollars to each country to make it possible for that particular country, by self-help and mutual aid, to become financially solvent.

BUT IN allocating military aid, we cannot make every country solvent, that is to say impregnable in a military sense. To many countries we can give only the guarantee we give, for example to west Berlin—that we would go to war if it were attacked. It is impossible to give them the kind of guarantee which we give to Alaska, Hawaii or the Canal Zone.

HOW, IF WE must distinguish between the general guarantee and local defense, shall we determine specifically where to allocate military aid? The working principle should be, it seems to me, that we undertake to defend by building up local military power those countries which can contribute the most to our power to make good the general guarantee to all countries. We should supply the greater part of our military aid to those countries which can, when armed, themselves become guarantors against aggression.

Manifestly, within the Atlantic alliance Great Britain and France are preeminent in meeting this test. Military aid to them, if properly used, can become a genuine military investment. That is to say it can show a strategic profit in case of war. But to dole out weapons to countries which could not defend themselves even if they had them would be to weaken the total power of the alliance. For the weapons doled out would be subtracted from the other forces available.

The true test, therefore, is not whether a country "needs" arms. All countries feel they need them. The test is what use that country can be counted upon to make of the arms to back up the general guarantee.

FOR WE MUST remember that our guarantee covers much more territory than is included within the North Atlantic area—for example, the Philippines and Turkey. And on the other hand, not every foot of territory within that area can be covered by a pledge of local defense—for example west Berlin and even western Germany. We can never, therefore, afford to lose sight of the paramount principle that the purpose of arming the alliance is to support the general guarantee against aggression.

Arms Plan's Scope Scored

need." The Georgian said any major arms program should be delayed until joint defense arrangements have been made under Article 9 of the treaty. Even then, he said, the Senate should pass in advance on our representatives on the Joint Defense Council.

George said he agreed with Vandenberg and Dulles, however, that Congress probably ought to pass an "interim" program. He said this should cost no more than 300 or 400 million dollars. This amount, he said, could be used for "reconditioning" some of our reserve stocks of weapons to send to Europe.

Types Out Statement

Vandenberg typed out his own statement on a press gallery typewriter.

"The President's emphasis on collective security is sound," it said. "But my first impression is that his program must be rewritten and curtailed to get action at this session. It is too wide in scope and too general in grant of power. It ignores the machinery which the pact provides for its own implementation. Its statement of policy puts too much emphasis upon arms. Since some sort of action is necessary before adjournment, I think study should be given to an interim measure while major plans, await reports to the next Congress under Article 9 of the pact."

Dulles' statement closely squared with Vandenberg's. The former UN delegate, who served as foreign relations adviser to Governor Thomas E. Dewey in two presidential campaigns, said the bill should be rewritten "to bring it into harmony with the North Atlantic Pact."

Instead of a "modest, non-controversial interim program," Dulles said the Administration presented "an ambitious one-year program to cost over a billion dollars to build up individual military establishments in the treaty countries."

With an Understanding

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) said he believed the program should be approved with the understanding that it involves no "long-term commitments" and that "maximum self-help be required of recipient nations."

But Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), who also voted for the treaty and generally adheres to the bi-partisan foreign policy line, said it would never pass in its present form. In any event, he said he will offer an amendment a complete ban on sharing our atomic bomb secrets. He said the same prohibition should be written promptly into the atomic energy law.

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), who voted against the treaty, said the President's message was "premature, ill advised and . . . only added more confusion to his vacillating, zigzag foreign policy."

Despite the rash of GOP criticism, Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) predicted some type of arms program will be passed. He declined to be more specific at this time.

Senator Elbert Thomas (D., Utah), another member of the Foreign Relations committee, said he favored the Administration's foreign policy "and will support what the President recommends."

ly reoffered the amendment without the offending provision and Barkley ruled it in order.

Lucas retaliated by moving to cut committee staff expenses to $100,000. In the angry debate that followed, Lucas charged the "watchdog" group wasn't practicing what it preached in the way of economy, that it was increasing its own outlays while trying to cut ECA.

McCarran, backed by Senate Appropriations Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) and some other members of his committee, accused the leader of belittling the work of the group and said he was "sarcastic."

Lucas finally accepted a "suggestion" by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) that the foreign aid investigators be allotted $200,000, about the same amount it received this year.

The Senate, however, stood by the "watchdog" committee. In a roll call vote, crossing party lines, it voted 41 to 30 to give the group the $344,000, it asked.

The House, which failed to provide any funds for the "watchdog" committee, saying it was unnecessary, is expected to make a fight to knock it out of the bill in conference.

As ECA supporters squared off for a battle to restore 74 million dollars of last quarter Marshall Plan funds and a series of "crippling" restrictions, critics of the program moved to hedge the bill with even more restrictions.

Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) took the floor for an amendment to deny further Marshall Plan aid to any nation which socializes any additional basic industry. Aimed at Britain and France, the amendment lost by a tie vote in committee. When Kem reoffered the proposal in the Senate yesterday, names of two additional sponsors were on the amendment —Senate GOP Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) and Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ala.).

Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) meanwhile took the floor in behalf of a 50-million dollar loan to Spain, written into the bill by the committees over Administration objections. This is one of the "restrictions" ECA supporters hope to knock out.

"It is impossible to have a strong Europe without a strong Spain," Eastland said. Accusing the Administration of helping Russia "destroy capitalism in Spain," Eastland argued Spain would be willing to buy 300,000 to 350,000 bales of American cotton if she could obtain the American loan.

Among other amendments singled out for a bipartisan drive to free the program of legislative side issues, is a proposed "freeze" of ECA money for purchase of surplus American farm products and a proposed ECA "review" or orders for dismantling German chemical plants.

U. S. Bars Atom in U. N. Arms Census

Lake Success, July 25 (AP).—United States delegate Frank C. Nash said today the United States is ready to bare precious military secrets in a United Nations world arms census. The United Nations especially excluded the atomic bomb from such an arms count, however.

Nash, deputy United States delegate on the United Nations Commission for Conventional Armaments, told that group the United States had reached this decision only after carefully weighing the implications involved.

He said the United States supports the plan only because it feels it might represent a turn in the tide of cynicism which he declared is running at high tide, with much of the world fatalistically inclined toward the conviction that war is inevitable.

Backs French Plan

Nash gave full American backing to a French proposal before the commission. This calls for a United Nations agency to be set up to collect information on armaments and armed forces of United Nations members. The Soviet Union has denounced the plan as a device by the western powers to spy on the Soviet military machine.

Nash said the Soviet and Ukrainian opposition is based simply on the "Soviet's unwillingness to let the rest of the world know how far they have gone in arming themselves for the world conquest which is their avowed goal."

Dmitri Manuilsky of theSoviet Ukraine and Semyon K. Tsarapkin, acting chief of the Soviet delegation, immediately demanded the time for an extended reply.

Manuilsky said with sarcasm that the comment that the Soviet is preparing for world conquest is a matter wor psychiatrists and not for the commission.

The commission adjourned to give the Ukraine and the Soviet delegates a chance to reply before voting.

The chairman of the U. N. Atomic energy commission has asked the acting secretary general of the U. N. to start six-country talks on control of atomic energy, a reliable source said today.

This informant said Dr. H. R. Wei, commission chairman this month, asked Byron Price, acting secretary-general, to arrange a meeting of the top delegates of the United States, Soviet Union, France, China, Britain and Canada and to furnish a place for secret sessions.

The talks would be a last-ditch effort to find a basis for agreement between Russia and the West and end a three-year deadlock on control of the atom.

Egypt's King Orders New Government

Cairo, Egypt, July 25 (AP).—King Farouk shook up the Egyptian cabinet today in a reported move to broaden the Government as a step for general elections in the fall.

The king accepted the resignation of Premier Ibrahim Abdel Hadi Pasha, Saadist party leader whose government halted war with Israel last February.

The monarch then asked Hussein Sirry Pasha, veteran independent politician and former premier, to form a new coalition cabinet including both Saadists and the WAFD, Egypt's other major party. The WAFD has been in opposition since 1944.

Informed sources said the king acted under opposition pressure for a neutral coalition cabinet during the forthcoming general elections, so that neither side could claim they were unfair. A new parliament for a five-year term will be chosen in October.

(This dispatch gave no further indication of the background of the reorganization. Egypt has maintained censorship of both incoming and outgoing cables since last year's Palestine fighting.)

Arabian Oil Royalties Discussed in London

London, July 25 (U.P.).—Britain's Middle Eastern diplomats in secret conference at the Foreign Office were reported today to favor increased royalties to Arab governments for foreign oil concessions.

The increase would create a fund for the resettlement of 900,000 Arab refugees which British diplomats said was one of the most important considerations in the Middle East economic development.

Brigadier Glubb Pasha, commander of Hashamite Jordan's (Transjordan) Arab Legion, administrator of funds for resettlement, was reported en route to London.

Movements of Middle East diplomatic representatives added an air of mystery to the conferences.

Official sources said it was possible that service chiefs would be called to the closing sessions of the conference Tuesday evening when a communique is to be issued.

North Atlantic Pact Linked To Arms Aid by Schuman

Paris, July 25 (NYHT).—French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman told the National Assembly during debate on the North Atlantic Pact today, that the pact was intimately bound with an American program of arms aid to France.

"The French government," Schuman said, "considers that the pact forms a part of a whole, and therefore we believe that the aid we have solicited should be set in motion immediately upon ratification of the pact."

"The absence of the United States (from European counsels) and the lack of cohesion between European nations made possible Hitler's aggressions," Schuman said. "Today, for the first time, an intercontinental barrier is raised against all war, and it is not correct to say, as the Soviet memorandum maintains, that the pact ignores the German danger. It is directed against any aggressor, whoever he may be."

Debate will carry on well into the week.

On another matter, the right of workers to a cash vacation bonus has the government in trouble.

Premier Henri Queuille, took notice today of the criticism of granting bonuses by making it an act subject to a vote of confidence. The government may find itself in hot water over the matter before the Assembly adjourns for the summer.

Bomb Tests Caused No Ship Changes, Blandy Declares

New York, July 25 (AP).—Admiral W. H. P. Blandy said tonight that underwater atomic bomb tests at Bikini showed no major revision of ship design was necessary to withstand such blasts.

Blandy is commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet and former commander of the atom bomb tests.

"Minor improvements such as the strengthening of certain structures against blasts and shock and general streamlining of vessels were the most realistic approach for protection from the atom bomb," he added.

He said "fleet tactics now include procedures for defense against atomic attack. These are aimed not only at destroying the attackers but reducing the number of ships sunk or damaged by any bombs dropped."

"Immediate decontamination procedure for ship and crew have also been initiated," he said.

Antipoll Tax Bill Up for Vote Today

Average Rules

Bird, Bear Meals Beat Sales Tax

A restaurant-goer who likes a hearty meal can save himself a few sales-tax pennies if he takes a light eater along with him.

The dodge became evident yesterday with the issuance of a new ruling on restaurant meals by the District Sales Tax Division.

The tax experts have ruled that vendors may issue one check for a party at one table. Division of the total charge by the number present will be considered the average figure and the tax base.

If the average charge for each meal is below $1.26—the exemption point—no tax will be charged to any member of the party.

In other words, if Mr. Smith buys a $1.75 steak feed and Mrs. Smith settles for a hamburg sandwich and a bottle of milk (or vice versa) the steak would not catch the sales levy.

The group meal check ruling does not apply, however, to liquor. All spirits purchased will be taxed in their entirety.

Meanwhile, Sales Tax Administrator Allan F Brooke said that yesterday brought the biggest rush of business thus far from local merchants applying for certificates of registration. Up to last night over 7000 of the city's retailers have applied for the necessary forms.

Brooke again urged merchants to obtain application blanks, which may be picked up at any bank, police precinct, firehouse or the District Building.

Antipoll tax legislation scored an initial victory in the House yesterday but a final vote was delayed until tomorrow.

It cleared its first hurdle when members voted, 134 to 46, to bypass the House Rules Committee and take up the legislation.

It is the first of President Truman's civil rights proposals to come before either house this session. Southern Democrats, who oppose the entire program, promptly denounced it as "politics."

The bill, which forbids collection of a special poll tax in the election of a President and other Federal officials, is expected to pass the House easily today. But it faces a determined filibuster in the Senate, where Southerners have talked five similar measures to death in the past 10 years.

Yesterday was the first time the House used its new machinery for getting around the Rules Committee. The committee acts as a legislative "traffic cop," but it has routed much New Deal legislation onto dead-end streets in recent years.

The Southerners managed to force seven time-consuming roll calls in their efforts to defeat the resolution to take up the bill. But Administration forces, backed by Republicans, finally forced a vote and the resolution carried.

Thurmond Urges State To Abandon Poll Tax

Columbia, S. C., July 25 (AP).—South Carolina Gov. J. Strom Thurmond urged his State tonight to abandon the poll tax as a voting requirement, even as Southern Congressmen were battling a Federal anti-poll tax bill.

He noted that the Legislature had submitted to the people a State constitutional amendment to eliminate the South Carolina poll tax as a prerequisite for voting.

"It is my sincere hope that this amendment will be approved in the 1950 general election," Thurmond said.

employe had been a Federal referee in bankruptcy during the period when such a post was not under the Civil Service retirement system. During the period he was a referee he was entitled to receive 1 per cent of the assets distributed under his jurisdiction. According to the House Committee the former referee earned a peak of $220,000 from January 1 to June 30, 1937, but he was not required to contribute to the Civil Service retirement fund.

The month of service in the office of a House member during which he paid in the $7.43, has made him eligible to receive an annuity based on his past earnings while with the Government. Under present law the House committee said he is entitled to $17,500 a year, or he may take $15,000 a year and his wife, after his death would receive $8750 a year. Congress last year enacted legislation which makes $10,000 the salary limit on which retirement benefits can be computed, but the law did not apply to the period the unidentified employe was working as a bankruptcy referee.

Worked for Representative Macy

Jerry Kluttz wrote in his column in the early edition of The Washington Post published last night that the employe worked during December, 1948, in the office of Representative W. Kingsland Macy, Republican, of New York. Representative Macy's office said Oscar W. Ehrhorn, of 263 West End avenue, New York, was employed during that period.

A check of the New York Herald Tribune's files showed that Ehrhorn was a Federal referee in bankruptcy who in June, 1937, handled the liquidation of the International Match Company. He officiated at two sales which brought in $8,246,000 to the concern's bankrupt estate.

News to Ehrhorn

In New York Ehrhorn was asked yesterday at his home whether he was the civil service employe who received $17,500 a year in retirement benefits for a $7.43 premium.

He told a reporter to see him this morning at his office, 70 Pine st, and would answer no questions last night.

He was asked: "Did you receive $17,000 a year in retirement benefits from the Government."

"Well," said Ehrhorn, "thank you for telling me."

"Do you mean," asked the reporter, "that this is the first news you have had of it?"

"That's right," said Ehrhorn, "good night."

Ehrhorn, former president of the National Republican Club in New York, served more than 20 years as a bankruptcy referee. He was the referee who handled the Kreuger and Toll and International Match Company bankruptcies.

How Tax Affects Professional Services

(Third of a series)

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

District entrepreneurs and professional men will render service with a smile—and without a sales tax, for the most part—after Sunday.

The sales-tax regulations exempt [illegible] where personal property involved is an "inconsequential element" of the service charge. This has been defined as less than 10 per cent.

The definition is expected to clear the way for tax exemption for services furnished by doctors, lawyers, insurance men, dentists and other professional men. The same holds for barbers, beauty parlor operators, laundry and dry cleaning establishments and exterminators, except when they are selling merchandise. Transactions of real estate men are not taxable.

Individual orders for printing will be taxable, as well as periodicals other than newspapers. Such essentials to daily living as "True Romances" Magazine and the race track "scratch sheet" will be taxed.

In furnishing services where materials represent more than 10 per cent of the total price, the materials alone will be taxed, if billed separately. If no separation is made, the entire bill will be subject to tax.

Auctioneers will have no choice. They are required to collect the sales tax on all items "knocked down" by their hammers regardless of how much labor goes into the operation.

Here are some common problems:

Q. If I go to the barber shop for a complete treatment, do I pay tax on the entire bill?

Dental Trade Group Admits FTC Conspiracy Complaint

Attorneys for the American Dental Trade Association, charged by the Federal Trade Commission with conspiracy to eliminate competition in manufacture and distribution of dental goods, yesterday admitted the facts alleged in the FTC complaint.

The association and 142 of its 144 member firms named in the FTC charges agreed not to contest the charges, which were scheduled for hearings beginning yesterday.

They also agreed that the commission might serve upon them an order to "cease and desist from any methods of competition" claimed to be violations of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The manufacturers and dealers cited in the complaint, who distribute more than 75 per cent of the Nation's dental supplies, were charged with conspiracy to eliminate price and other competition and to create a monopoly. Included in the charges was one Washington firm, the W. A. Lockwood Dental Co., Inc.

The firms' admission of the facts as alleged was "for the sole purpose of avoiding the trouble and expense" of defending themselves in the proceeding against them, according to a statement filed with Trial Examiner Frank Hier.

Of the two firms which failed to file such an admission, one, American Platinum Works, asserted that no representative of the company had attended any association meeting in the past 10 years.

The other, Ohio Chemical and Manufacturing Corp. of Madison, Wis., was not included in the general action taken. A hearing in this case was set for 2 p. m. on August 8.

Two officers of the association, whose headquarters is at 1010 Vermont ave. nw., filed motions to dismiss the charges against them. They are Milton Goolsby, who ceased to be dealer section chairman six months before the charges were made, and Wilmott C. Mack, who has been secretary only two years.

Dulles Picked For D. C. Unit

ations Committee, is scheduled to be filled by Senator William F. Knowland of California, who lost his place on that major committee when it was reorganized in January.

That Republican assignment will be created through the transfer of Senator A. Willis Robertson, Democrat, of West Virginia, to the Rules Committee, where he will take a majority seat being relinquished by Senator Russell B. Long, Democrat, of Louisiana, to enable him to move up to the Banking and Currency Committee vacancy caused by the recent resignation of Senator Wagner because of his health.

Party Ratio Changed

The bumping of Senator Robertson from the Appropriations Committee was made necessary by a Democratic agreement to change the ratio of its membership from 13 Democrats and eight Republicans to 12 to nine in recognition of the shift in the Democratic-Republican ratio in the Senate membership to 53-43 with the appointment of Senator Dulles.

A study of the committee rosters last night indicated the possibility that the two Republicans making room for Senator Dulles on the District of Columbia and Postoffice committees might be Robert C. Hendrickson of New Jersey and Raymond C. Baldwin of Connecticut. That was based strictly on the reasoning that Senator Hendrickson, who is the junior Republican member of both committees, might be willing to relinquish his D. C. committee place, and that Senator Baldwin, a member of the Postoffice Committee is planning to retire from the Senate to take a Connecticut judgeship after this session of Congress ends.

Tribe Wins, 4-2, Cuts Yank Lead to 3

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

AT LONG LAST, the badge-wearing brass hats of the Pro Golfers Association have found something resembling a highsounding excuse to give the works to Bobby Locke, the South African pro who was winning too much of their purse money.

They blacklisted Locke from all future PGA-sponsored tournaments in this country on complaint of the Toledo Inverness Tournament officials who were miffed by Locke's withdrawal from their event after winning the British Open.

POVICH

It was a complaint well received by the clique that runs the PGA and which apparently had been laying for Locke for months. Tournament Bureau Manager George Schneiter made haste to point out that Locke had "walked out" of numerous other United States tournaments and otherwise violated PGA regulations.

Not until this thing happened, however, had Locke been charged with walking out on any specific tournaments for which he had filed entry, and to the unbiased observer it smacks of shabby treatment of the colorful foreigner who endeared himself to United States golf galleries.

THERE HAS BEEN nothing sudden about the anti-Locke sentiment among the PGA brass. They refused to invite him to compete in the 1948 and 1949 PGA championships after accepting his entry in '47. It had been customary to invite visiting pros, but in Locke's case they decided that his "visits" covering several months were too long. It was plain that they considered Locke was overstaying his welcome.

They began to take a dim view of Locke when he started winning a lot of the prize money that ordinarily would have gone to American pros. He took away more than $50,000 in the three years he campaigned in this country, and was arousing the jealousy of PGA big shots by commanding more money for exhibition dates than they did.

Locke was in demand by tournament sponsors, and it did not help his popularity with United States pros when George S. May, promoter of the rich Tam O'Shanter tournament gave Locke $5000 as "appearance" money a couple of years ago to insure his presence in that event. Locke was preparing to leave for the British Open at the time, but canceled that trip to pick up the $5000 honorarium from May.

AS A PROMOTER, May was aware that Lock's presence in the tournament was surefire gallery stuff. United States golf galleries flocked to Locke's tournament appearances. He not only thrilled them with his superlative play from tee to green and his downright sensational putting, but he humanized the game for them with his customer-appeal.

In contrast to the stony-faced robots of the American pro golf scene who brooked no awareness that the fans were part of the tournaments and played as if resenting their presence, Locke talked to the galleries and acknowledged their applause by tipping the little white cap that distinguished him. The American pros finally began to catch on, themselves, and broke down to the point of tipping their own caps and waving to the customers.

Thus Locke was doing the game a service. And American pros who smirked originally at his old-style, pronating swing soon began to be assailed by doubts of their own upright swinging styles. More than one of them was seen practicing the Locke swing and if they didn't adopt it, at least they were giving it a thought.

SCHNEITER, WHO announced the ban on Locke, made the point that the PGA tournament committee had found, after a careful study of all the facts, that "Bobby Locke has on numerous occasions violated the PGA Tournament regulations and the tournament players agreement of the PGA of America, which he signed."

Did you ever get a look at a part of that Players' Agreement the pros are directed to sign when they go on tour? If Locke has violated that section, then it is entirely forgiveable, because it's a piece of high-handed work to start with and aimed at muzzling the players' right of free speech.

Some of it reads: "Suggestions, criticisms or complaints involving the association, the sponsors, the club, the course, the players or the conditions of play, if they be necessary, shall be referred to the Association's tournament committee for their official consideration and shall not otherwise be made or publicized through any other person . . ." A tournament player can't open his mouth in protest to club members, the press or even his wife, lest he be hauled on the carpet. They must talk only through the PGA Committee, a condition to which in the past Locke has apparently reacted with a slightly cockneyed "Nuts!"

14,288 See Weik Beat Pittsburgh For Nats, 3-1

Trouble with the Nats is they're in the wrong league.

After losing 10 in a row in the American League, they turned around and whipped the Pittsburgh National Leaguers, 3-1, last night.

The exhibition was a benefit for Attorney General Tom Clark's program to combat juvenile delinquency and the AG himself was among the surprisingly strong turnout of 14,288 who witnessed the Griffith Stadium match.

Weik Fans Eight

The Nats won because Dick Weik, juvenile member of their mound staff, was not at all delinquent in his pitching.

He threw a healthy four-hitter at the Bucs, struck out eight of them and held Ralph Kiner and his home run clouters without anything resembling a home run.

He fanned Dino Restelli once, Wally Westlake once and Kiner, the third member of the Bucs' murderous row, also once.

Nats Take Lead

Sitting in the flag-bedecked presidential box, Mr. Clark made a short speech praising baseball for its contribution to his program and then tossed out the first ball. It was caught by Pitcher Al Gettel.

Righthander Ray Poat, who gave up two runs, and the veteran Elmer Riddle tossed nine-hit ball for the Pirates. Sherry Robertson, Eddie Yost and Clyde Vollmer got two hits each to pace the Nats attack.

Yost's double and Stewart's single staked Weik to a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but one of five Weik walks, a wild pitch and two infield outs tied it up for the Bucs in the fourth inning.

The Nats charged back in their half of the inning to forge into a 2-1 lead, produced on a Vollmer double, a passed ball and Eddie Robinson's infield out.

The third and final Nats run was at the expense of Riddle in the eighth inning. Sherry Robertson's walk, Buddy Lewis' single and Yost's fly to right drove it over.

The Bucs did all of their home-run hitting in batting practice. In a morning drill, Restelli lashed five balls into the left field stands, Kiner two . . . In the pregame batting session, Kiner drove one into the center field stands, 450 feet from the plate, and another into left-center, 10 rows deep . . . Except for the fourth inning when the Bucs got their lone run, they got only one man as far as third base against the fast-balling rookie from Waterloo, Iowa . . . It was Weik's second win over the Bucs. He beat them in a Cooperstown, N. Y., exhibition in June, 8-7 . . . Kiner walked, amidst the boos of the crowd, on his first appearance at the plate, struck out the second time and flied to Vollmer on his other two appearances. Vollmer had to race to deep center to haul down his second smash . . .—SIEGEL.

D. C. Kids Sports Fund Gets $15,326

Net proceeds from last night's Nat-Pirate exhibition game at Griffith Stadium amounted to $15,326.60.

This represents every penny taken in, less tax. The money will be used to promote sports for needy youngsters in the Washington area.

WTOP Sports Announcer Arch McDonald, president of Sports America, under whose auspices the game was played, last night praised "Washington's great baseball fans who made this wonderful contribution to the youngsters in our community."

SOMETHING FOR THE BOYS—Pittsburgh and the Nats played an exhibition game last night at Griffith Stadium with all proceeds going to Attorney General Tom Clark's fund to combat juvenile delinquency. Wynn Needs Paige's Help In 8th to Beat Raschi

New York, July 25 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians defeated the New York Yankees, 4-2, tonight, to cut the Bronx Bombers' first place lead in the American League race to three games.

Early Wynn with the help of Satchel Paige in the eighth, bested Vic Raschi before a paid attendance of 71,354.

Vernon Drives In Mitchell

What proved to be the winning runs, however, resulted from a passed ball and a wild pitch. After Mickey Vernon had brought in Mitchell from third with a long fly in the fifth, Yankee catcher Gus Niarhos allowed a pitch by Raschi to get away from him and Thurman Tucker scored all the way from second.

In the eighth, Manager Lou Boudreau singled, was sacrificed to second, moved to third on an infield out, and scored when Raschi uncorked a wild pitch.

It took two singles and a double to provide the Yankees with their first run in the third.

Rizzuto Doubles in Run

George Stirnweiss followed a single by Raschi with another one, but Raschi was caught trying to get back to second after rounding the bag too far. Phil Rizzuto then doubled to score Stirnweiss.

The Yankees tallied again in the eighth and sent Wynn to the showers. Rizzuto and Tommy Henrich singled, with the little shortstop racing to third. Paige relived Wynn at this point and retired the next three men in order, with Rizzuto crossing the plate on Joe DiMaggio's fly.

Kuhel Junks 2-Platoon System

Class B Pitcher From Cuba, Ortiz Join Nats Tomorrow

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Hopeful that the combination will snap his Nats out of their 10-game losing streak, Manager Joe Kuhel got some advice and two ball players from President Clark Griffith last night.

Griff suggested, and Kuhel heeded it, that the Nats junk their two-platoon system, use one lineup regularly and sink or swim with the unit.

One of the two athletes who'll be on hand Wednesday is Outfielder Roberto Ortiz, a fixture here five years ago when the Nats carried on heavy baseball traffic with Cuba and other Latin-American countries.

Senor Ortiz, an infrequent but long ball hitter, was one of the Mexican League jumpers Commissioner Chandler reinstated last month. He's coming up from Venezuela, where he's been wowing them with his home run bat.

New Pitcher Is Consuerga

Accompanying Ortiz will be Pitcher Sandalio Consuerga, who has been purchased from the Havana club of the Class B Florida International League.

Both Griffith and Kuhel admitted that they didn't know too much about Consuerga, a right-hander, but they have the word of Scout Cambria "that he can't miss being a big leaguer."

Although property of the Havana team, Pitcher Consuerga has been playing in Venezuela along with Ortiz, another Cambria discoverer. Considering the present plight of the Nats' pitching staff, Consuerga doesn't have to be another Bob Feller to win a job. Just getting the ball over the plate will earn him a position.

The regular lineup—one which will be played regardless of the type of pitching it faces—finds Buddy Lewis, Clyde Vollmer and Ed Stewart in the outfield with Stewart, a lefthanded swinger, replacing the righthanded Vollmer as the cleanup hitter.

Lewis will bat second and Vollmer fifth with Eddie Robinson dropping to sixth. Al Kozar and Sherry Robertson will alternate at second and leadoff and Jake Early and Al Evans will share the catching and bat eighth.

Eddie Yost, who's been hitting at a .341 clip since returning to the lineup, has been dropped from leadoff man to third place.

Heretofore, Kuhel has alternated his lineup, packing it with right-handed batters when a lefthander was pitching and vice versa. This proved eminently successful in the early part of the season when the Nats were somewhat wonderous, but it's served them to no avail lately as they've dropped 24 out of 29 to become somewhat blunderous.

IN SHORT—The new unit receives its first test tonight when the Nats launch a four-game, three-day series with the Detroit Tigers . . . Paul Calvert (6-9) will face rookie lefthander Ted Gray in the opener . . . During the present 10-game losing streak, the Nats averaged 10 hits, four runs and three pitchers a game. Sonny Boy West Stops Williams

Cards, Bums Battle to 4-4 'Train' Tie

Brooklyn, July 25 (AP).—Brooklyn and St. Louis, battling for the National League lead, played a 4-4 tie game today when the contest was called at the end of the ninth inning to permit both clubs to make train connections.

By mutual agreement between the two top contenders, no new inning was to start after 3 p. m. (EST) because both the Cards and Dodgers had to hustle west for tomorrow's games. When the last Dodger out was recorded in the last of the ninth, with two men left on base, it was 3:11 p. m. (EST). Extra innings were out of the question.

The Cardinals, who swept the first three games of the series to snatch the league lead by a half game, rallied to save their slender margin in a three-run sixth inning. Up to then it looked as though the Brooks might start their third western swing in first place.

St. Louis is scheduled to play a night game at home against the Phillies tomorrow night and the Dodgers must make an early train to get to Chicago in time for tomorrow afternoon's game. Today's game, originally scheduled and rained out May 10, will be fitted into the Cards' final eastern swing in late August.

Price, Rice Put Match on Ice

Charley Price and Lloyd Rice came from behind to register a 4—6, 6—0, 6—2 third round win over John Addison and Upton Guthery in the District of Columbia Recreation Department men's doubles championships yesterday at the Rock Creek courts.

Price and Rice were consistently missing with their volleys and overheads for the first half hour of the match and it cost them the first set.

They found the touch at the start of the second set, however, and hammered their opponents unmercifully. For the rest of the way in the winning team did not lose their serve once.

In a first round women's doubles match, Margret Graham and Mary DeFreitas disposed of Lois Deitemeir and Joan Gordon, 6—3, 6—1; and in second round competition, Sara Moore and Frances Bassett downed Glenore Hall and Ann Fennessey, 6—3, 6—3.

Chapman, Lutz Win Easily

Saint John, N. B., July 25 (U.P.). Dick Chapman of Osterville, Mass., former United States amateur champion, and Buddy Lutz of Reading, Pa., each scored an easy 5 to 4 victory today in the first round of the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship at the Riverside Club.

Defending Champion Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, drew a first-round bye.

Chapman, a member of the American Walker Cup team, easily defeated Bob Emerson of Saint John in his opening match. Lutz, a 21-year-old surprise package, just as easily whipped J. B. Girrard of Saint John.

The only two upsets of the day saw Jim Harper, 20-year-old Willington Cup player from Alberta, nip Walter Reed, jr., of Fort Fairfield, Me., one up, and Bill Davidson of Saint John defeat Willingdon Cupper E. B. Pyke of Montreal, one up.

A total of 132 players competed in the first round.

Numerous 'Walkouts' Cited as Cause

Bobby Locke Outlawed in America by PGA

St. Paul, Minn., July 25 (AP).—Bobby Locke, the British Open golf champion, today was blacklisted in this country by the Professional Golfers' Association.

Locke

The PGA ban goes into effect at once.

Locke will be outlawed from any PGA-sponsored event as a result of his repeated failure to keep commitments at exhibitions and tournaments, the association's tournament committee said.

The South African's surprise withdrawal last week from the $15,000 Inverness Invitational golf matches at Toledo and today's PGA bombshell caused an explosion in golfdom heard all the way from the Thames to Tam O'Shanter.

In Chicago, George S. May, millionaire promoter of the Tam O'Shanter tournament, announced that the PGA ruling automatically bars Locke from his lucrative tournaments.

May said he has an exclusive contract with the PGA which prohibits him from inviting golfers outside the ranks of the association.

The Chicago promoter received the news of Locke's blacklisting with cool approval. He commented.

"Locke should have been fired long ago. If one of our American golfers walked out of a British tournament he'd be banned right away."

May said he talked with Locke by trans-Atlantic telephone last night and told him of the consequences of Locke's belated Inverness withdrawal.

May said Locke, who was in Yorkshire, England, expressed eagerness to play in the Tam O'Shanter $50,000 Open early next month.

When told last week of the possibility of PGA banishment, Locke said:

"I feel certain May will welcome my appearance in his event. I received a cable from Scotty Fessenden, president of the Western Golf Association, asking me if I could not possibly reconsider getting there Thursday to play in the Western Open in St. Paul."

Locke added that he was unable to get an air booking to the United States until Thursday (July 28) when he would "definitely leave for America."

The announcement of Locke's disbarment was made in St. Paul by George Scheiter, PGA tournament bureau manager. It said:

"After a complete and careful study of all the facts, the PGA Tournament Committee found that Bobby Locke has on numerous occasions violated the PGA tournament regulations and the tournament players' agreement of the PGA of America which he signed.

"The committee therefore has of this day withdrawn their invitation to him and his entry will no longer be accepted in any PGA-sponsored event."

Although the PGA committee cited Locke's "numerous walkouts as the reason for his banishment, it was reported his withdrawal from the Inverness tournament caused the immediate rupture. Schneiter said it was a contributing factor but not the only reason.

Schneiter declined to identify the person who filed the complaint against Locke. But Stanley J. McGiveran, chairman of the Inverness matches, said he sought Locke's dismissal.

McGiveran said Locke's withdrawal was "a very belated one," he disclosed he recommended to the PGA that the South African be barred from all future American tournaments.

Fish Situation At Alarming Stage in Bay

By Ralph Murdock

SHOCKED BY THE ACUTE SHORTAGE of fish in Chesapeake Bay, the Virginia Fisheries Association has sent out an urgent letter to all the members, commercial fishermen and dealers, calling for an early meeting to analyze the existing situation.

Murdock

During the last few years the run of trout has been mediocre, the blues have only shown up in snapper sizes and last, but not least, the croakers which furnish the bulk of the bottom fishing in this area have been conspicuous by their absence for the most part.

"The situation is alarming," the association letter reads. "If this condition continues it will mean financial ruin for many of our Virginia fishermen. Members of this association feel it is urgently necessary to try to determine the cause and try to seek aid by some means to bring about a correction."

The fish are scooped up with dip nets and thrown into a flat-bottom scow. By the time the keepable fish are assorted from the "trash fish" the throwaways have expired and are tossed overboard. Tons of small fish are destroyed by this method.

THE SEA GULLS are the only ones that benefit by this "Murder Inc." process. Even sea gulls can eat just so many. The balance of the dead fish are left to float around on the surface to drift with the tides which has a tendancy to create pollution.

The present fish shortage was not caused by the rod and reel fisherman for he pays for every fish he takes from the water. How many times have you been with a fishing party when $25 was plunked down for a boat trip and the catch was 25 spot or less?

Simple arithmetic proves a ½ pound fish costs $1 or $2 per pound at the above rate. Sometimes they catch nothing and the price goes up accordingly. It's the sport of fishing that appeals to the anglers. They are a good bunch.

AS A CONVINCER that the hardheads are still around, here's a nice catch made between 11 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. It was made by Joseph Lear and his wife, Emily and Charles J. (Red) Smith from a rowboat at the black and white buoy about one and one half miles off Deep Creek in Herring Bay.

Clarence J. Russell, his son Clarence J. Russell, jr., and William Wannall took seven hardheads and 35 hefty spot from a rowboat near the same position.

CAPTAIN ROXIE from Herring Bay had a Washington party that proved to be "high gun" thereabouts with a catch of 51 hardheads. A rowboat docked after Holland Point fishing with 25 croakers one of which tipped the beam at 4½ pounds.

Floyd Bibbee and his wife, Jenny, David Povich, Helen Matthew, William Bennett, Johnny Clark and the writer, while trying to catch a bit of cool air, fished from the pier at Franklin Manor. It took 30 minutes to catch the first two hardheads. Then the fish began biting in earnest. We ran out of shrimp, so sent for more. Our total was 24 jumbo-size croakers. The depth of the water was approximately 4 feet.

Inshore fishing for croakers picked up over the weekend. The boats that fished in deep water came in with everything with the exception of croakers.

Gil Blanks Georgia Boy; Rogers Wins

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 25.—Top-seeded Gil Bogley of Washington, D. C., breezed through the first two rounds of the Western Junior Tennis Championships today.

The national junior champ downed Henry Little of Birmingham, Mich., 6—1, 6—1 in the first round, and Oscar Mullis of Atlanta, Ga., 6—0, 6—0, in the second session.

Washington's other entry, Ted Rogers, won his opening-day round from Bob McDole, South Bend, Ind., by default.

This year's field of 166, including both the boys' and junior division, is the largest in Western tournament history.

All the favorites who had to start with the first round had virtually no trouble with their lesser known opponents.

Fourth ranked Jerry Dewitts of Oakland, Calif., eliminated Larry Goldbeck of San Antonio, 6—1, 6—2; fifth seeded Jack Turpin of Dallas, Tex., downed C. H. Symington of Grosse Pointe, Mich., 6—2, 6—1; and Charles Hickox, ninth rated, from Berkeley, Calif., beat Bob Russel of Kalamazoo, 6—2, 6—3. Other seeded players had not faced their first tests yet.

Mob of 18 Attends Nat 2d Homecoming

Maytime Fans Missing After Griffs Slump

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THOSE WONDROUS Nats, early-season terrors of the American League, limped back to Union Station yesterday morning from the West, where they just finished losing 10 games in a row.

There were no bands to greet them.

Neither was their boss Clark Griffith there to welcome them. Nor 50 golden Packards, with chauffeurs to parade them down Pennsylvania ave. Nor Arch McDonald, Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), nor District Commissioners John R. Young, Guy Mason and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young.

In fact, the only familiar faces who participated in the Nats Maytime triumphant return from the West were five ever-faithful members of the girls Nats Boosters Club and the wives of Gil Coan, Mickey Harris, Mark Christman, Doc Lentz, Sid Hudson, Ed Stewart, Joe Haynes and five of their kiddies.

THERE WAS also a Washington Post reporter who still insists that the Nats are wondrous. That made a party of 18 welcomers. Joe Ives, Associated Press reporter, was there too, but you can't count him. He was paid to be there at arrival time, 8:30.

Mrs. Hudson was commenting about how tough it is being the wife of a player on a losing team. "But we married them for better or for worse," she spoke up for the wives. Somebody laughed.

UP AT 6:30 A. M. to get to the station on time were Nats' boosters Joy Hancock, 15, 5213 New Hampshire ave., nw.; Shirley Abbott, 17, 15 Longfellow st. ne.; Joanne Boulan, 15, 6611 First st. nw., and Gerry, 17, and Shirley Reeder, 15, sisters of 44 Longfellow, ne.

The boosters waved posters saying "Welcome Home!" "Lose or Win, Don't Give In, Don't Be Blue, We're With You." Kuhel managed a wry smile.

18 Canoe Titles at Stake In Potomac Regatta Sunday

By Happy Walker

ONE ELEMENT OF WASHINGTON aquatic sports which is increasing in popularity by leaps and bounds is that of canoeing, both racing and canvas. This was proven conclusively over the weekend as the Middle States Championship races were staged up the Potomac off Three Sisters Island before a loudly-cheering audience.

Walker

Chalking up total points were Washington Canoe Club-52, Dempsey's Boat Club-25, Potomac Boat Club-20 and Philadelphia Boat Club-7. Larry Singer was the only double winner for the day, taking top honors in both single and double blade events.

This Sunday will see the Washington clubs as hosts to the National Champion Canoe racing regatta with some dozen clubs from here to Boston entered. Starting at 10 a.m. eighteen events in junior, intermediate and senior championship classes will be staged throughout the day, each with a championship at stake.

BOATING FOLKS in the Washington area are invited to "look in" on Channel 5, Station WTTG Dumont, now sponsoring a series of weekly telecasts on the Coast Guard Auxiliary. The program falls on Thursday at 7:15 p. m. Capt. F. D. Courtney, Comdr. Allan A. Carney and Joseph C. Boswell will appear on the forums.

DID YOU happen to see that odd contraption resembling a power driven surfboard at any of the watering places recently? The contraption, we find, is a "skim boat," which is just that. Weighing only 120 pounds it will do up to 25 m.p.h. and can be used standing, sitting or prone.

For those whose boating allegiance runs to sailing events, here is the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Racing Schedule for August:

August 5-6, Miles River Yacht Club Regatta; August 6-7, Annapolis Yacht Club (Hampton one-design national championship); August 12-14, Oxford Race Week—Tred Avon and Chesapeake Bay Yacht Clubs); August 12, Gibson Island—Oxford Race; August 13-14, races at Oxford; August 20-21, Sparrows Point Yacht Club Regatta; August 20-21, Virginia Yacht Club Regatta; August 20-21, Corsica River Yacht Club Regatta; August 25-28, Annapolis Yacht Club (Penguin class national championship); August 26, Rappahannock River Yacht Club—Norfolk-Irvington Race; August 27-28, Rappahannock River Yacht Club Regatta; August 27-28, Baltimore Yacht Club (Thistle class national championship); August 27-28, Indian Landing Boat Club Regatta (also Eastern area championships, national one-design); August 27-28, Tred Avon Yacht Club (2nd District novice series for stars); August 28, Naval Academy Yacht Squadron Regatta.

Germans to See U. S. Stage Plays

By Richard L. Coe

AS REPORTED in these columns Sunday, the Blevins Davis "Hamlet," jointly sponsored by the State Department and the Air Force, was a resounding hit with our airmen in Germany.

So much so that the State Department representatives overseas, who take over administration of the American zone in the fall, now plan to sponsor professional American theatrical tours in Germany as a cultural, propaganda device.

Already, Robert Breen, director of the Davis "Hamlet" and executive secretary of ANTA, has returned to Germany to map out details with the numerous governmental agencies involved, both American and German. The plan is to present fine plays with top-flight American actors to dissuade the Germans from Soviet propaganda that ours is purely a Nation of gumchewers and nitwits.

If carried out, this plan will mean a good deal to the American theater.

(1) The Government will be recognizing, officially, the power of the theater as a cultural medium.

(2) The theater will benefit from increased employment and recognition, both matters that have been seriously neglected by the commercial theater, now throttled by excessive union demands and managerial palsy.

All this is being planned from the European end by the officials who will be in the saddle when John McCloy takes over his new, rugged post. These people have been in the position to see the value of cultural relations at first hand and their reports all reflect measured surprise and complete satisfaction with the brief "Hamlet" tour in the American zone.

Few Civilians Admitted

Only a few German civilians attended these performances, which were primarily for the benefit of the Air Force personnel, but those who did were key people. With conspicuously poor liaison between the many branches of government in Germany, some officials were amazed to find American actors in their midst.

One German editor learned about a performance through Stars and Stripes and tore away from dinner to wheedle his way into the theater. Another official stated that a six-month tour could have been arranged had so long a stay been possible.

To achieve this far-sighted plan will require union cooperation all the way, but it's a great chance for the theater and its people.

CONGRATULATIONS to Sylvia Altman, executive chairman of the newly formed civic-labor committee, whose aim is "to sponsor the movement for restoration of the legitimate theater in the National Capital and to encourage worthy efforts in this direction." . . . They've a long row to hoe: the Celler bill is still "tied up in committee," as they say on the Hill; the most promising of all such bills, the Douglas bill, is starting its way through a Senate which has its eyes on adjournment . . . Miss Altman's a live wire and has gathered three exceptionally able cochairmen: Leon Chatelain, former president of the Board of Trade, C. F. Preller, president of the Washington Central Labor Union, and Thomas P. Morgan, jr., member of the District Boxing Commission.

KAY FRANCIS had the heat to face yesterday afternoon, but she had the pleasure of watching the first water trickling into the new swimming pool which will be serving the Olney actors shortly . . . Coming from the land of swimming pools, Kay knows a good one . . . After some 75 film roles in Hollywood, Miss Francis lately has taken to the stage which gave her her start . . . Tonight she'll begin her week in Rachel Crothers' comedy, "Let Us Be Gay," with Joel Ashley, Mae West's old beau (stage!).

Saroyan's 'Time of Your Life' Stars Dowling, Its First Fan

WILLIAM SAROYAN'S mood-play, "The Time of Your Life," is being well played at the Meridian Hill Theater with Eddie Dowling in the role he created.

DOWLING

With Alexander Kirkland as director, this seems to me the most successful of the fountain-side stage's offerings. After the stresses of a blue-hazed, dank Monday, it was pleasant indeed to muse under the trees with the California Armenian on the complexities of life. Gradually people seem to be catching onto the fact that at Meridian Hill neckties are a noose, ladies' gloves a needless addenda. Informality is the key at this play spot and I'm sure Saroyan would be delighted with such a setting for his musings.

He would be pleased too, to find Dowling again in the lead he created nearly ten years ago, for it was Dowling who sat across the table from him one night at the Algonquin and said: "Any play you write, I'll buy sight unseen."

It took Saroyan six days to write the first draft and some months to see it reach the stage, but that season the play—and this was it—took the Pulitzer Prize.

In Nick's San Francisco saloon what happens to 20-odd characters is next to nothing. Joe is a loafer with money and a good heart. Tom is his errand boy and admirer. Kitty Duval is a street-walker whose dreams keep her soul clean. Kit Carson dreams of his eventful life. Krupp is a cop who hates his work but can find nothing else to do for a living.

And, lest Washington's vice squad mastermind, Roy Blick, think that the vice squad cop named Blick in this play has been renamed for this week only, let him rest at ease. Blick is what Saroyan called him in the first place.

Dowling's Joe is effortless and easy. You'll enjoy Eddie Garr's Kit Carson and Lois Hall, though far less ladylike than Julie Haydon's Kitty, is effective. Theodore Newton (remember "Dead End?") has a fine scene as the bewildered cop and Leo Chalzel is the bartender. Les Williams is good as the piano player.

Witty, bewildered, tender, gay and sad, "The Time of Your Life" has the old magic.—R. L. C.

Postal Pay Revision Bill Called Unjust, Hasty Legislation

The opposition bloc to the postal pay-reclassification bill was heard from yesterday.

Chairman Murray of the House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee, described the bill as a "piece of hasty legislation." He explained that it was "unjust" to postmasters and supervisors and that it didn't even include part-time and fourth-class postmasters.

"If the House votes to discharge my committee from further consideration of the bill," Murray warned, "I'll do nothing about it—I'll let those who signed the discharge petition handled it."

More than the necessary 218 House members signed the Walsh petition and the House will take it up on August 8. It was clear that Murray and a number of his committee colleagues were provoked by the discharge action since it came at a time when the committee is holding public hearings on the 75 pay-reclassification bills before it.

At yesterday's hearing Murray repeated that he would do everything in his power to get a pay-reclassification bill for classified workers before the House by August 8. He said he'd go down the line for equal treatment for Federal workers.

Two top postal employe leaders testified for the bill. They were: William C. Doherty of AFL's letter carriers, and William C. Armbrust of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks.

The bill would give postal field workers 26 days annual and 15 days sick leave like all other Federal workers. These people are now limited to 15 and 10 days respectively which Doherty said was a "most glaring discrimination." Also, the bill would wipe out the first four postal grades, add a flat $150 pay raise which would make $3100 the starting salary for clerks and carriers; a $100 annual uniform allowance for employes required to wear them; add four new $100 longevity promotions, and abolish the efficiency rating system.

Armbrust, in defending abolition of the rating system, said the present system allowed 15 ways for a postal employe to get a merit, and more than 200 in which he could get a demerit.

Murray said the bill would cost 237 millions a year which, he declared, would push the probable postal deficit to nearly 900 millions during this fiscal year.

The Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee is scheduled to meet today on classified and postal pay-reclassification bills to be recommended to it by a subcommittee headed by Senator Long (D., La.).

LOYALTY: Federal agencies yesterday were notified of additions to the Attorney General's list of so-called "blacklisted" organizations. Their loyalty boards use the list as a guide to help them decide employe loyalty cases. Listed as "Communist" were:

American Rescue Ship Mission, a project of the United American Spanish Aid Committee; Emergency Conference to Save Spanish Refugees, founding body of the North American Spanish Aid Committee, and the National Conference on American Policy in China and the Far East, a conference called by the Committee for a Democratic Far Eastern Policy.

The information was relayed to Federal agencies by Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Loyalty Review Board, who wrote:

"The Attorney General states further that the designation of the Communist Party, USA, and of the Communist Political Association includes, of course, all of the State and local branches and factions of the parent groups. Thus, the Florida Press and Educational League bears the same designation as its parent body, the Communist Political Association. The Daily Worker Press Club and the Yiddisher Kultur Farband are also included in the designation of the Communist Party, USA."

Fairfax Real Estate Valued at $45,075,720

The total value of Fairfax County real estate has been set at $45,075,720, the commissioner of revenue's office announced yesterday. The figure represents an approximate $6,000,000 increase over last year.

GI Training Defended by D. C. Schools

Trade Instruction Graduates Receive Jobs, Officials Say; Plan Talks Today

Aroused by criticism of the value of its instruction, the Washington Trade Schools Association will meet today to plan rebuttal action.

"We are not going to take this lying down," Forrest E. Peters, the association's public relations representative, said in announcing the meeting at 2:30 p. m. at the National Institute of Commerce and Technology, Inc., 1332 New York ave. nw.

The local schools giving GIs trade instruction have been criticized by the D. C. Apprenticeship Council and tre Washington Building Trades Council as giving inadequate instruction and turning out students unable to find employment.

Fact Finders Appointed

The District Commissioners have appointed a 19-man fact-finding committee to inquire into the situation.

"We are not going at this thing with a lot of smearing," Peters said, "but we have a story to tell."

Speaking for his own school, Peters, president of the Peters School of Horology, said approximately 250 persons had graduated from the school, after a 24-month course, "and all who have graduated have jobs in the field."

Peters said his school, with a current total of approximately 427 day and night students, is one of only 26 schools for watchmakers in the country certified by the Horological Institute of America.

"Hoodwinking" Charged

Gerald E. Gould, director of the Capitol School of Typewriter Mechanics, said in a statement that criticism of the schools was an attempt to "hoodwink" businessmen and public officials "in a grab for power by unscrupulous employers and Government officials."

The "campaign" has the cooperation of "employers seeking 'plentiful cheap apprenticeship help'" through on-the-job training, and "labor unions envious of GI trainees who refuse to toe the line," Gould said.

Gould said his school had turned out approximately 125 graduates, not enough to fill the requests for men the school has received.

Gould is president of the Trades School Association, which has 12 member schools.

Falls Church Approves Tax Rate of $1.90

A $320,938 budget with a tax rate of $1.90 per $100 evaluation was approved unanimously last night by the Falls Church City Council.

A last-minute addition of $6000 for a down payment on a new fire truck resulted in a 10-cent increase over the previously proposed tax rate, but the new levy of $1.90 on the $100 evaluation will still be 30 cents cheaper than last year. The reason for the reduction is elimination of the 40-cent levy Falls Church residents had to pay Fairfax County before the city was incorporated last August.

Because incorporation occurred after the start of the 1949 fiscal year, town officials do not have a 12-month figure to offer for comparison with the new budget total which is for the fiscal year starting July 1.

The new total includes $268,506 for general administration and $52,432 for capital outlay. The estimated cost of administration for the full 12 months of last year was about $255,000, members of the council said. Comparative figures on capital outlay were not immediately available.

Among major items in the new budget were $26,535 for administration; $56,468 for police and fire protection; $15,880 for planning, zoning and extension, which includes an allocation of $10,500 for possible annexation proceedings; $15,590 for promotion of cleanliness, including trash and garbage collection, and $20,000 in a special reserve fund to be set aside for adjustments with Fairfax County on completion of an audit of town funds now under way.

Th $6000 toward a new fire truck was approved after a delegation of about 10 firemen appeared before the council and urged purchase of a new fire ladder truck. Dr. W. D. Claudy, District fire surgeon who is drill master of the local department, told the council "if we don't get a new truck, someone's liable to get hurt."

Junior Corps Asks $25,000 To Carry On

Civic, Congressional Support Enlisted At Dinner Meeting

The board of directors of the Junior Police and Citizen's Corps last night called upon civic and congressional leaders for $25,000 to carry on the work of the youth organization.

At the same time, President G. Howland Shaw gravely urged participation by these leaders in providing additional guidance to the more than 10,000 youths who belong to the seven-year-old association whose primary aim is to keep youngsters off the street and out of trouble.

Shaw said the adult-sponsored youth group serves only 30 per cent of the underprivileged youngsters in Washington at the present time but added: "What we are doing has national significance since we are an organization designed not merely to give benefits to children but to enable them to help themselves."

Guests at the Mayflower Hotel meeting pledged wholehearted support.

Sen. Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) declared: "I am amazed sometime by the little attention we members of the Congress give to District afairs . . . but we are busily concerned and worried about the direction the world is going. However, we live in the most potentially disastrous age the world has ever seen, and we may soon have to depend on the youth of today for complete salvation."

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), an honorary vice president of the corps pledged his support to the organization and urged directors of the club to give the youthful members the opportunity to express themselves and do something for themselves by means of a strong organization.

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) offered his aid and argued that juvenile delinquency costs communities far more than constructive guidance programs.

In Hyattsville

2 From D. C. Fined $725 For Speeding

A midnight automobile race on the George N. Palmer hwy. in Prince Georges County last Saturday cost two Washington motorists a total of $725 in fines yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court.

Found guilty of exceeding 70 miles an hour, racing on a public highway and reckless driving were Elmer W. Miller, 28, of 1821 15th st. nw., and Wilton B. McNeal, 29, of 1316 S st. nw. Miller was fined $350 by Judge Alan Bowie and McNeal, $375.

Corpl. Lee Pumphrey of the county police testified the two cars were traveling at more than 70 miles an hour and were passing and repassing one another on the highway. The drivers attempted to outrace him, he said, but McNeal's car was wrecked when the two tried to turn off at Sheriff rd.

Neither McNeal nor his four passengers were injured, although the car was demolished when it struck a light pole. There were five passengers in Miller's car.

Abducted By Bandit, Driver Says

Deliveryman Tells Of Giving Up $367, Then Being Freed At Rendezvous

A gunman robbed an ice-cream deliveryman of $367 in a daylight holdup shortly before 4 p. m. yesterday, then forced his victim to drive to a spot where he escaped with accomplices in an automobile.

Albert J. Mechlin, 25, of 5119 T st. se., a driver for the Meadow Gold Ice Cream Co., told police he made a delivery at Oscar's Market, 141 D st. se., before the holdup occurred.

When he climbed in his truck, a man climbed in beside him and confronted him with a .45 caliber automatic. The bandit ordered Mechlin to drive to the unit block of Virginia ave. sw. En route, he forced him to turn over his money.

Mechlin told police he noticed that a car followed them. When he reached the requested destination, he said, the gunman climbed from the truck, ordered Mechlin to drive straight ahead, then climbed into the rear seat of the car which had been trailing the truck.

The deliveryman described the bandit as a dark-skinned Negro, about 30 years old, 5 feet 7 inches, 180 pounds, with a raised burn scar about 2 inches long on his left forearm. The man wore a light tan short sleeve sports shirt, dark trousers and was hatless, Mechlin said.

Mechlin said the car which followed behind was a 1946 or 1947 green Plymouth sedan with either Maryland or Virginia tags. It was driven by a second man, he said, and a woman sat on the front seat beside him.

Rooftop Route Used In Four Burglaries

Rooftop burglars robbed four downtown business establishments of more than $300 in cash and about $1400 worth of merchandise over the weekend, police learned yesterday.

All of the housebreakings occurred within a radius of less than four blocks.

The yeggs broke into the Edgar Morris Sales Co. offices, at 712 13th st. nw., by climbing up the fire escape of an adjoining building, going across the roof, and then down the Morris Sales Co. building to a third-floor window.

Gouge Hole in Safe

Then they made their way to a second-floor office where they gouged a large hole in the door of a five-foot safe. They got the safe open but it contained no cash.

However, they got $43 from a register and a television set, several radios, fans and vacuum cleaners valued at $800.

Also entered was the catalogue store of Montgomery Ward, which is next door at 714 13th st. nw. Again the yeggs made their way into the building from the rooftop and via a third-floor window. This time, however, they got nothing for they could not get the safe open.

Studio Loses $229

A fire escape and third-floor window also provided the means of entrance to the Gold Craft Portrait Studio, 716 12th st. nw. The thieves ripped off the door of a safe and took $229.

Johnny's, a restaurant at 1313 E st. nw., was robbed also by high-altitude burglars. The thieves broke through a second-floor skylight and stole $60 and whisky and cigars valued at $600.

Woman Taxi Driver, Maid Holdup Victims

A woman taxicab driver, and a maid reported two separate holdups to police yesterday.

The maid, Janet H. Moseby, 30, of 1208 Euclid st. nw., said she was robbed of $18 by two men who posed as Western Union messengers. They came to the door of the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Foster, 1620 Fuller st. nw., where she is employed, she related.

Suspicious of the men, she tried to prevent their entry, she said, but they forced their way in, went through a drawer, taking a billfold belonging to the Fosters, and then hers with $18. They fled in a blue convertible, she told police.

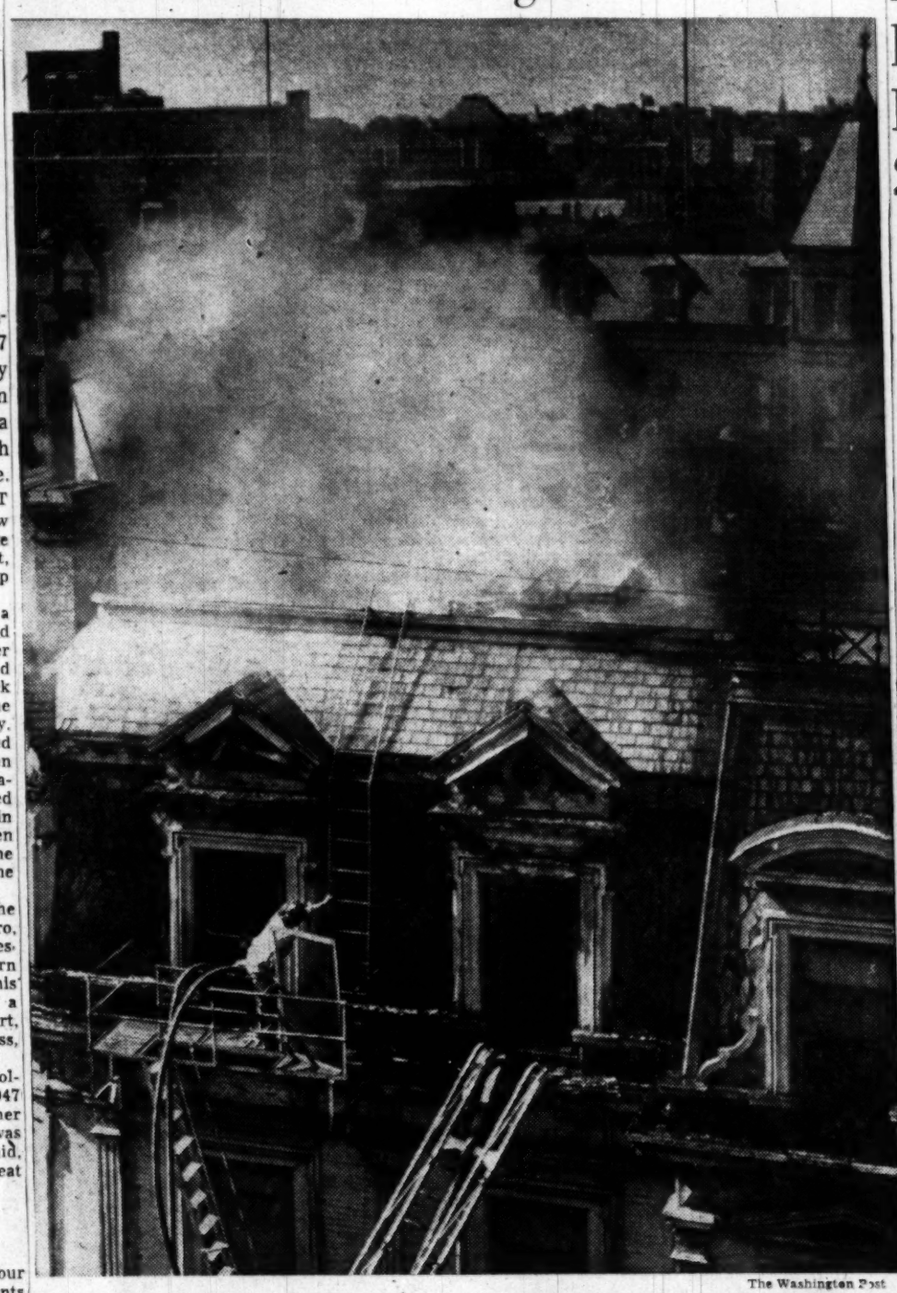
Miss Moseby described one of the men as about 25, short and stocky, wearing dark trousers and soiled white shirt. The other, she described, as slender and tall, wearing gray slacks, pink shirt, and sporting a goatee.

Viola Morris, 37, of 1103 6th st. nw., working for Capitol Cab Co., said she was robbed of $6 by one of four men just as she stopped to deliver a sailor at West Potomac Park barracks. The man jumped from an automobile and apparently had a gun in a coat pocket, she said.

The sailor, Edwin Graft, 20, verified her account of the holdup. The other three men remained in the automobile which, she said, had followed them from Wisconsin ave. and M st. nw., where the sailor engaged the cab.

She described the "gunman" as of medium height, wearing brown clothing and with his left arm in a brown sling. The car bore New Jersey tags, she said.

Blaze Routs 12 at Rooming House . . .



The Washington Post

ATTIC BURNED OUT—A fireman stands on fire escape of a rooming house at 1402 Massachusetts ave. nw. as a blaze is brought under control after gutting the attic. The fire was discovered shortly before 5 p. m. yesterday by a District fireman on the way to work. He warned the dozen occupants of the house and summoned fire equipment. The third floor of the house was damaged by smoke and water, leaving one family of four temporarily homeless. Cause of the fire was not immediately determined, but police were told some children were playing in the attic a short time before the blaze was discovered

Home Blaze Here Brings Injury to 2 Firemen

Two firemen were injured slightly yesterday while fighting a two-alarm fire which burned out the attic and top floor of a three-story rooming house at 1402 Massachusetts ave. nw.

The blaze, spotted by an alert District fireman on his way to work, left a family of four temporarily homeless, disrupted rush-hour traffic around nearby Thomas Circle for more than an hour, routed a dozen occupants from the building and gave firemen one of their toughest workouts of the summer as they worked in heavy raincoats atop the structure in a sweltering 95-degree temperature.

The fire was reported at 4:37 p. m. by Pvt. Walter Assur, en route to report for duty at Truck Co. No. 6. First firemen to arrive at the scene immediately called for more equipment, and a second alarm was recorded at 4:41 p. m. The blaze was reported under control at 5:20 p. m.

Warned Occupants

Assur, who noticed a cloud of smoke pouring from the roof of the rooming house, first turned in the alarm and then ran into the building to warn the occupants. At least a dozen persons were inside, witnesses said, including four persons on the top floor which later was badly damaged by smoke and water.

Among those on the floor were Mrs. Alton Jones, a Czechoslovakian war bride, and her two sons, 2½ years and 3 months old. Neighbors last night were attempting to find temporary lodgings for the family, most of whose possessions were damaged by fire, smoke and water.

Another third-floor occupant, Mrs. Marie E. Thompson, lost most of her clothing, but said she was not concerned with the housing problem. She had planned to move today to a new apartment.

Hundreds of persons, many en route to their homes from work, watched the firemen's battle against the combination of fire and the humidity. Many were attracted to the scene by the smell of smoke, which hung heavily over an area within a four-block radius of the blaze.

Deputy Fire Marshal Roy Warfield said an estimate of damage was not immediately available. He said he had been unable to locate the operators of the rooming house.

The origin of the blaze was not determined immediately.

Senate Backs Police, Fire Death Benefits

The Senate yesterday approved and returned to the House a compromise bill to increase pensions for widows and children of District police and firemen.

Early House approval is now expected for the compromise agreement worked out by a joint conference committee. Senate approval was given by a voice vote on motion of Senator Lester C. Hunt to drop from the bill a provision (D., Wyo.).

By its vote, the Senate agreed to drop from the bill a provision it had earlier written into it for a $1000 death benefit to be paid to the estates of police and firemen killed in line of duty. It also reduced from $500 to $250 a funeral payment, and extended it to all firemen and policemen.

The bill increases monthly widows' pensions from $60 to $125, monthly children's payments from $10 to $25, and boosts from 16 to 18 the top age for the children's payments. It also increases from 3½ to 5 per cent the payroll deduction from police and firemen's salaries for their retirement fund.

Drink-Food Ratio Is Key To ABC Case

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday took under advisement its ruling on whether the liquor license of Brinkley's, a restaurant at 533 8th st. se., will be revoked.

It is charged that the restaurant's chief source of revenue is from the sale of alcoholic beverages and not from the sale of food which is contrary to the Alcoholic Beverage Act passed by Congress.

The license is held by Theodore J. Sheve and William J. Schaefer. According to Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert D. Wise, Scheve is now at liberty pending appeal of conviction of a gaming charge for which he received a one to three year sentence.

Samuel Appel, of 2617 30th st. se. told the ABC Board at yesterday's hearing that he was manager of the restaurant from May 3 to 16, during which time the sale of liquor far surpassed that of food. ABC inspectors testified similarly.

Schaefer admitted this was true, but said that the sale of meals usually drops off in the summer. He said since the inspections were made in May efforts have been made to increase the sale of meals and that food sales are now increasing.

Aftermath of Shot

Man Sues For Change in Personality

A total of $340,000 damages was asked yesterday in a District Court suit by a man who claims his personality was changed by an operation necessitated by a gunshot wound in his brain.

Suing is Coley B. Chapman, 26, of Jamaica, N. Y. The defendant is the Washington Terminal Co., Inc. The shooting occurred February 26, while Chapman was being arrested by Terminal Policeman Carl Neuman, according to court papers.

Chapman said that he was shot in the forehead, the bullet going through the roof of the skull. He said he submitted to an involuntaary partial frontal lobotomy.

The suit, filed through Attorney Henry L. Johnson, jr., claims that Chapman's personality changes include loss of initiative, resulting in a reduction in possibility of personal advancement and self-improvement.

Chapman was charged with assaulting Neuman, but was acquitted after trial.

Chapman's suit charges assault, wrongful arrest, malicious prosecution, humiliation, embarassment and violation of his civil rights.

Rickenbacker Safe As Bus Escort Is Hit

Baltimore, July 25 (AP).—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, who has come mighty close to death while flying, experienced a "near miss" on the ground today.

The Eastern Air Lines president was in a bus being escorted by Motorcycle Cop Donald Fisher to inspect Baltimore's new airport.

A truck driven by Jack Schollian came out of a cross street and bumped Patrolman Fisher off his cycle.

The bus continued on its way with Capt. Ricken Rickenbacker urging, "Let's get away from this guy."

4 Policemen Added to Force In Takoma

The Takoma Park, Md., City Council last night appointed four additional policemen to the municipal force for a six-month probationary period beginning August 1.

The action fas taken to enlarge the force since county policemen stationed in Takoma Park will be removed August 15 under a new law passed by the Montgomery County council to do away with dual jurisdiction.

The appointees, all veterans, will be paid annual salaries of $2640.

They are: Albert Lee Thompson, jr., 24, of 722 Sliigo ave, Silver Spring; Vincent Carlisle Cooley, 27, of 7201 Flower ave., Takoma Park; Lawrence Morgan, 29, of 336 Montgomery st., Laurel, Md., and Anthony L. Decharo, 28, of 6213 Queens Chapel rd., Hyattsville, Md.

The council adopted an ordinance prohibiting angular parking on both sides of New Hampshire ave., near Sligo pkwy.

The law and ordinance committee, headed by Councilman W. C. McClenon, was directed to prepare an ordinance prohibiting the exposure of food by merchants outside their stores. This was the result of a complaint made by Donald D. Lamont, former Corporation Counsel of the city, who said a market doing this was a "health menace and public nuisance."

Residents of Eastern ave. opposed a plan to install curbing and tree planting on the parking area because, they said, it would make the street too narrow to allow parking.

It would also require one-way traffic which would cause inconvenience to the residents, they said. They asked the council to hold up the bids for street improvements until the matter is more thoroughly investigated.

Civitan Club Luncheon

The Civitan Club will hold a luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. today in the Hotel Mayflower. Miss Eileen Virginia Foster, a Civitan International essay contest winner, will be honored.

New Jersey Man Killed, Wife Hurt In Collision

A 69-year-old Montclair, N. J., motorist was killed instantly on the Washington-Baltimore highway when the car he was driving collided head-on with a tractor-trailer truck driven by a Washington man about 8:30 p.m. last night.

The victim was identified as Justis Kilian by Maryland State Police at Halethorp. Kilian's wife was admitted to St. Agnes Hospital, in Baltimore, in an undetermined condition.

The truck driver, Ollie C. Hardison, 30, of 1701 Kilbourne pl. nw., was charged with manslaughter and reckless driving, and released on $1000 bond.

Second Suit Filed to Obtain Patterson Will Clarification

A second suit was filed yesterday in District Court asking instruction as to the meaning of portions of the will of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, the late newspaper publisher.

Mrs. Patterson, who was the owner of The Washington Times-Herald, died July 24, 1948, leaving an estimated $16,500,000.

A suit to determine the rights of certain beneficiaries under the will was filed last week. Yesterday's suit asks judicial construction of other portions.

The court is asked to determine, among othe rthings, what to do with the unimproved realty at 1323 H st. nw., located near the newspaper plant. The executors want to know whether this land goes along with the newspaper to seven designated employes who inherited the business.

Another item is what to do with the income which has been earned from certain portions of the property prior to distribution among the beneficiaries and what portion of the estate is to bear the necessary costs during the past year.

Father of Boy Bitten by Spider Gets Traffic Ticket Adjusted

A motorist who rushed his young son to a doctor for treatment of a spider bite was one of 89 who had traffic tickets adjust or fixed last week, police reported yesterday.

James J. White, 38, of 4635 Hilltop Terrace se., had recived a ticket for parking in a bus stop. It was canceled when he explained the emergency.

His son, James, 11, he said, had reached into a barrel of nails and had been bitten on the hand by a large spider. White placed the boy in his car and rushed him to a nearby doctor's office. There was no available parking space so White left his car in the bus stop.

The boy, it was learned yesterday, has not suffered any ill effects from the spider bite.

A ticket given James S. Porter, 21, of 4220 Gault pl. ne., was changed to a warning when Porter explained he had made an emergency stop in a no-parking space to report to the compensation clinic for treatment of an amputated finger.

Two tickets were canceled because of diplomatic immunity. One had been given to Jan Grooters of the Netherlands Embassy for parking in front of a red meter. The other went to Alfonso E. Berg of the Mexican Embassy for standing in a no-standing zone.

Man Tells Truth—Even if It Hurts

Theodore Roosevelt Meekins, 45, is a man of candor, even the police will admit.

Yesterday, at about 2 p. m., vice squad detectives stopped Meekins in the 500 block of Florida ave. nw. He was carrying a large bundle. He was asked what was in the bundle.

"Why, numbers slips and money," police quoted Meekins. "I was on my way to turn 'em in."

Meekins, who lives at 814 Florida ave. nw., was charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. He was freed in $1500 bond and will appear for hearing in Municipal Court today.

Drunk Quotas Assigned

Two Municipal Court judges handled drunkenness cases yesterday in a move designed to reduce the number of hours policemen must spend in the tribunal.

The jurists, Ellen K. Raedy and Frank H. Myers, heard a total of 126 cases involving drunks, disorderly conduct and the like.

Judge Raedy was through her quota at around 11 a. m., and began jury cases at that time. Judge Myers finished at noon.

Judge Myers said he was "delighted" with the new arrangement, estimating that it cut three hours or more off his Monday schedule hearing the cases involved.

Engineer For Hotel Found Dead

Slumped behind a desk in the basement of Wardman Park hotel, the body of Harry C. Inman, 54, the hotel's chief engineer, was found yesterday with a bullet wound in the right forehead.

Mr. Inman

On the floor near the body, a .22 calibre revolver was found. One cartridge had been fired. Seven live cartridges remained in the cylinder.

The body was found shortly after 7 a.m. by the hotel's assistant engineer, Guilford Cannon, and a plumber's helper, Angus Love.

Police found a sealed note to Inman's wife and three sons, in which he wrote he had been despondent over ill health.

Inman was pronounced dead on the scene by an Emergency Hospital physician.

He was a native of Virginia, and before joining the hotel staff last March had been employed as chief engineer of the Trans-Lux building and in the same capacity at Gallinger Hospital.

District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald is investigating.

Inman is survived by his wife and three sons, Harry, jr., of Branchville, Md., James M. and William, both of Washington.

He had just recently built a home in East Lanham Park, Md.

Groups Seek To Open Pool To All Races

Twenty-four Washington organizations yesterday proposed a plan to open the now-closed Anacostia swimming pool and run it on an interracial basis.

Copies of the plan were sent Interior Secretary J. A. Krug, whose order closed the pool after racial disturbances and to Recreation Board Chairman Harry S. Wender.

The announcement by the groups said "this plan has already been given some consideration by persons in the Interior Department."

Among the sponsors were the Interracial Workshop, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, American Veterans Committee, Washington Area Council, Federation of Civic Associations, Americans for Democratic Action and the American Jewish Congress, National Capital Chapter.

The plan, in two parts, calls for "sympathetic cooperation" of Metropolitan and Park Police, of newspapers which would be asked not to print the date of the opening and public statements of Interior Department policy and sanitary precautions.

Detailed recommendations were made on the number of life guards, attendants, police and the informal stationing in the area of "priests, ministers and others who command respect" is called for.

The plan proposes opening the pool from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. with only those 14 and under admitted the first week.

Adm. Harris Funeral Held In Arlington

Funeral services were held yesterday in Arlington Cemetery for Rear Admiral Frederic R. Harris, USN (ret.), head of a New York firm of consulting engineers, who died last Wednesday in New York City.

Admiral Harris, 74, was a native of New York City and a graduate of Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J., where he received a degree in mechanical engineering in 1896. He entered the Navy as a lieutenant (jg.) in 1903 after several years of civilian engineering practice, and served until his retirement in 1927, when he formed his own firm of consulting engineers.

Between the time he entered the Navy until his promotion to rear admiral in 1916, Admiral Harris had tours of duty at the navy yards in Charleston, S. C. and New York as well as service at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and Pearl Harbor.

In 1916 Admiral Harris was appointed chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks here, serving until December 26, 1917, when he was made general manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation of the United States Shipping Board. He later was appointed public works officer for the New York Navy Yard and served as district public works officer for the Third, Fourth and Fifth Naval Districts.

At one time he served as construction engineer to the British Admiralty.

Admiral Harris was a member of both the Army-Navy Club and the University Club here, the Union League and Collectors' Club of New York, the Society of American Military Engineers, the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, the Naval Institute, the New York State Society of Professional Engineers and Land Surveyors, the American Legion, the Royal Philatelic of London, the National Sojourners, the City Midday Club and the New Jersey Society.

Father of the Bride

For the Wedding Rehearsal, Everybody's Late But Mr. Banks—Groom Doesn't Appear at All

This is the tenth of 14 installments of that popular saga of the forgotten man, "Father of the Bride." This condensed version of Edward Streeter's novel chronicles the story of Mr. Stanley Banks as he watches the rise of the greatest show on earth (his daughter's wedding) and the fall of his bank account.

By Edward Streeter

Illustrated by Gluyas Williams

THE DAY before the wedding came at last.

The wedding rehearsal was scheduled for 5:30. Mr. Banks set out for the office exhibiting a nonchalance that he did not feel. Yes, of course, he would take the 3:10 from town. There was nothing to get so excited about. Beneath the surface, however, he was distinctly nervous. He felt like a man moving beneath powerful floodlights.

Whenever Mr. Banks thought about that morning during later years it was his telephone buzzer which sounded the motif of the nightmare cacophony.

"Darling, the worst thing. Old Mr. McQuade is down at the station.—McQuade, dear. I don't know. He's some relative of yours.—Well, it's no use arguing about that now. He's down at the station and he wants to know where he's supposed to go. Where in the world am I going to put him?"

"Darling, I'm so sorry to bother you again but I'm almost crazy. You can't imagine what's happened. The Bennett boy has come down with measles and they can't take in Cousin Laura and Bob. What in the world are we—I know, dear, but I thought you might have some ideas."

By 12:30 he could stand it no longer. Shoving a pile of papers into a desk drawer, he rang for Miss Bellamy. "I'm getting the hell out of here," he said defiantly.

Mr. Banks Arrives Early

SEVERAL DAYS earlier Miss Bellamy had sent crisp little notes to all the ushers and bridesmaids, attempting to impress upon their scattered minds that the rehearsal would be at 5:30 at St. George's Church and the importance of being prompt.

Mr. Banks had insisted on being there 15 minutes ahead of time. He wanted this wedding well rehearsed—no sloppy business—and he felt somehow that if he and Mrs. Banks were early it would expedite things. To his dismay he found the church in complete darkness. The Rev. Mr. Galsworthy and the organist were nowhere about.

He finally located Mr. Tringle in the cellar

He finally located Mr. Tringle in the cellar of the rectory gluing the back of a broken chair. "Good gracious," he exclaimed. "That late a'ready? Maybe we best go up an' put on the lights."

The first bridesmaid turned up at a quarter to six. She was a wispy little number who seemed to have been left out of everything to date and was obviously terrified at the thought of what lay ahead. The organist strolled in several minutes later.

"Are you sure," asked Mrs. Banks anxiously.

By 6:30 Kay and all but four of the bridal party had appeared. The minister was still absent. The groom was still absent.

Mr. Tringle Takes Over

"I WONDER where Mr. Galsworthy is?" asked Mr. Banks for the tenth time.

"Oh, he's somewhere. He's always late," said Mr. Tringle amiably. "I run the rehearsal."

"But some of the bridal party aren't here yet," protested Mr. Banks. "The groom isn't here. Nobody's here."

"Some of the bridal party is never here," said Mr. Tringle. "The groom don't do nothing in weddings. Now if you young ladies will line up in pairs outside that there door—"

They lined up, tittering and unwilling, as people line up for a group photograph which nobody wants taken. Once in place they unlined immediately. Mr. Tringle pushed them back like errant cattle. "O.K., Fritz," he yelled irreligiously. The organ suddenly gave a series of bumps and broke into the wedding march. Mrs. Banks watched nervously from a pew.

"It's too fast," she cried hopelessly as the skeleton procession dashed past her.

"You want to do it again?" asked Mr. Tringle, rubbing his hands with the air of one who has staged a great dramatic spectacle. "Hey, you. Big girl. You get in back row this time so's they can see the other bridesmaids. O.K., Fritz, shoot," he bawled.

They were off again. It wasn't the way Mr. Banks had pictured it. He gave a sigh of relief as he saw the Reverend Galsworthy enter the church, trotting like a pony and exuding geniality. Now they would get the situation in hand.

"Well, well, well," said Mr. Galsworthy. "All over, I see. That means I'm just in time. So sorry. Had a meeting. Do they know their stuff, Mr. Tringle? Good. Well, I'm sure it will all go off very smoothly and that it will be a beautiful wedding."

Mr. Banks could hardly believe what he heard. "But they haven't really begun to rehearse. Four of the bridal party aren't even here yet and the groom isn't here either. They tried it a couple of times and it was awful."

Mr. Galsworthy looked at his watch and clucked.

"They do all right," said Mr. Tringle. "O.K. tomorrow."

"Good," said Mr. Galsworthy. "Good. I have a meeting now. As for the groom—well, the groom is not very important at weddings, is he, my dear?" He smiled benignly at the wispy bridesmaid under the impression that she was the bride-to-be.

"Have your young man call me in the morning.

"O.K., Fritz," he yelled

I'll put him through his paces. I hate to rush, but I must. Don't worry. Everything will be fine."

Mr. Banks opened his mouth. "But—" A secretarial-looking person bustled down the aisle. "Mrs. Banks? There's a phone call for you in the Rector's office. I believe it's the groom's father and mother. They're at your house and they want to know if the rehearsal's over. I think the groom is with them."

"Sure," said Mr. Tringle cheerily. "Rehearsal's all over. Tell 'em to take it easy. Everybody'll be right home."

"But—" began Mr. Banks. Then he looked around. The bridal party had disappeared, bearing Kay and the wispy girl with them. Mr. and Mrs. Banks shook hands cordially with Mr. Gadsworthy and followed them.

"I do hope—" said Mrs. Banks.

"So do I," agreed her husband.

They went home to dress for the party at the Club.

Ready for His Third—And Last—Appearance As Father of the Bride

Mr. Lange is a gentleman who will have been "Father of the Bride" three times in a year when his last daughter, Janet Emily, weds Richard B. Weeks this Saturday. Twice before he went through the "terrible ordeal" when Carolyn Dorothy married Robert H. Peters on March 5 and Ruth Marion married John Hilldale on May 21. Besides the three daughters, he has one son who takes a dim view of weddings after helping Pop launch the girls.

By George A. Lange

IT ALL STARTED December 11, 1948, when two of my daughters announced their engagements—Ruth to John Hilldale, and Carolyn to Robert H. Peters. Two months later, the youngest, not to be outdone, announced that she intended to marry Richard B. Weeks.

To make matters worse, they all decided to be married this spring or summer. Visions of total bankruptcy disturbed my days and nights. I threw out vague suggestions about elopements, etc., but no soap. Nothing short of a church wedding and home reception for each one would do.

Carolyn decided to lead off on March 5, 1949, with a semi-formal ceremony at the Church of the Epiphany. At least I was spared a "soup and fish" outfit. The usual hubbub and conferences went on and all seemed well until three days before the wedding when I developed a sore throat. The doctor said, "Oh, it's just a little flu. You'll be O.K. in a week—stay in bed, and take this medicine."

Came the day of the rehearsal and my temperature shot up. Infection had set in. Frantic call for the doctor and he arrived just as we were leaving for the rehearsal. So he gave me more dope which, plus super human effort, at least enabled me to walk.

Came the wedding day and I woke up with a RASH! More frantic calls for the doctor. He assured us it was only a drug reaction. Came 4 p. m. and all outwardly serene, Carolyn and I marched down the aisle. My first daughter was launched.

Mr. Lange keeps his back carefully to the camera as he assists Carolyn Dorothy out of the car

TWELVE weeks later, May 21, was my second appearance. Our experience in March seemed like a minor detail compared to my trouble in stepping around Ruth's 3-yard train to give her away. This had to be worked out with mathematical precision . . . 2 steps back, 1 to the right and 3 forward, and she was on her way.

So now I await Saturday, July 30, when Janet is scheduled to marry Richard Weeks. It will be my last appearance as "Father of the Bride."

Skip the Smart Tricks, Says Ida Jean—Exercise Is Easy—Just Stretch, Twist, Bend

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

DURING my diet guinea-pigging last week, so many well wishers asked for my personal, exercising travail, duty obliges me to accede. However, since my year-in-and-out excercising has been desultory, to say the least, I'm straddling the issue by interviewing Ida Jean Kain and interlarding same with a few personal, highly inconsequential comments.

I was off to a good start with La Kain, boasting of my general physical resiliency, then showing off a few smart tricks I'd either thought up or copied from someone else.

Right off the bat I picked up a few pearls. "It isn't the exercises you CAN do, it's the exercises you DO do," she said with a slight touch of asperity. "The only exercises that do you any good are those you do WELL. I'd rather have you do 8 minutes a day than try to make up for lost time by a long session once a week."

I, mopping my brow, chin, neck, replied with equal sharpness, 'Because of this infernal telephone I find it hard to grovel on the floor at any set time.'

"May I remind you that you said you were so keen on exercising in bed, you never sunk to floor level," she said, flinging back the challenge.

Keeps You Young

"I honestly think," Ida Jean went on, "the average gal makes her mistake by thinking exercise is hard. It really isn't. It's just a stretch, a twist and a bend—and it keeps you YOUNG. Her second mistake, and yours, too, is that she thinks of exercise as an inanimate thing which applies to herself only. What she should do, and you, too, is to visualize exercises as something that will make her into a smooth, svelte sylph. You can imagine it as something animate that is going to make you feel 18 again."

Since, what with the weather, it would, even with my flexible imagination, be impossible to visualize myself any kind of a sylph and under 80, at that, I let these comments pass.

"The reason why I like people to exercise, to take a few with their calory clipping, is that it perks up their spirits as well as their figgers—it's physiological as well as psychological—it gives them an 'I'm doing fine' feeling."

Ida Jean was running on like a brook. I settled down with a glass of iced tea.

Change Your Thought Patterns

"DIETERS who don't take any exercise are liable to get very lethargic," said Ida Jean. "They're liable to fall for alcoholic stimulus, or relaxing with a box of chocolates, just to perk up their spirits."

At the word "chocolate," I perked up. She noticed it, went on disapprovingly:

"It's no use, to slim down if you're going to THINK like a fat woman. All THEIR thought patterns are aimed toward overeating."

Alas, after a hurried analysis of my thought patterns, I remembered only too well hundreds, yes, thousands, perhaps millions, of happy dreams about baked Alaskas, chocolate "goos" as served in Minneapolis, popovers at Bar Harbor, pastry in Istambul—and so on.

"If THEY want to be normal weight." I thought she beamed the "THEY" in my direction—"they can do it if they start thinking like a younger, slimmer woman. If they don't, nothing can make them snap back. Until they get this thought really into their way of living—it's no use to lose 10 pounds—you'll put it right on again,' she finished triumphantly.

Toning the Muscles

"IN ALL EXERCISES," Ida Jean said, "you've got to put the pull through the muscles you want to tone—concentrate on them, be sure they're getting into the act. Watch the animals at the zoo—not those skinks you're so crazy about—but tigers, leopards, lions. Watch them stretch, it's nature's way of exercise—and you'll see they never stretch jerkily—but smooth and easy."

Ida Jean locked hands above head, started bending sideways, her tummy muscles WELL under control. "Stretching gets the middle muscles—but to get to them you have to put the pull through the middle—you have to put it through the midriff."

She began to bend alarmingly, then gave a twist. "If you add a sidebend it increases the stretch, lessens your waistline, makes you more limber."

(To be continued Wednesday.)

Eat to Beat the Heat . . . And Take off Pounds

Correct Figure Faults With Mild Calisthenics

By Ida Jean Kain

THE BUMPY ROAD to avoirdupois is plain to be seen in summer. It is marked by a double chin, perhaps just a little one, "framed" in a low neckline. And where did that bump at the back of the neck come from? It wasn't there until you wore a sunback dress with your hair up! And suddenly the sag on the backs of the upper arms is exposed to over cynosure. Ah, yes, figure faults loom large in summer clothes. Worse yet, spotty overweight is more aging.

But exercise—in summer! How about swimming? That will fix everything. And if swimming is out, you can still get a smooth figure without much effort.

IDA JEAN KAIN

By merely lifting your head, you can banish the double chin and the dowager's bump. Toss the pillow aside, and raise your head off the bed without tipping the chin down. Repeat slowly, four times, every morning and evening—this simple exercise will bring beautiful results. Follow through by holding your head erect, for that is the best exercise of all.

With a mere twist of the wrist, you can take up the slack on the back of the upper arms. Stretch out arms at sides, shoulder level, palms up. Clench fists and slowly twist arms until palms are up again. Repeat 6 or 12 times, slowly.

The backs of the upper arms constitute what is commonly called a dead area, muscularly speaking, for these are not lifting muscles and are seldom put to work. The tendency to flabbiness can be counteracted by holding the arms correctly at sides. The right way is to have the soft part of the elbow, the inside, toward the body, with the backs of the hands facing forward. Once you get the knack, this is the easiest way to hold the arms.

Of course the largest figure fault is still centered in the midsection. I didn't mention it sooner for fear you wouldn't want to start an exercise program on a large scale. But just a brief "holding" exercise will help put gimp back in the middle muscles. So . . . bend knees and with soles of feet flat on floor or bed, raise hips until the body is a straight line . . . not too high. Don't arch small of back. With hips in air, pull up strongly with girdle muscles . . . and hold for a few seconds, then longer. It's the holding that does the toning. Release and repeat three times. Finish with a big stretch.

The Daily Walk

It is interesting when mother and the children go out for a walk to have some objective, such as a search for flowers, birds, or just a lovely view. Once a month a special trip to a museum, zoo, or some place of current interest is instructive and enlightening to young minds.

About School for Speech Defects

My 5-year-old daughter does not speak some words plainly—and some she cannot speak at all. Could you tell me where in Washington I can find a school that teaches speech or if there is such a school near here?
H. R.

Speech defects in a child as young as 5 are very apt to be symptoms of another difficulty. Therefore, the best way to correct the trouble is to first discover the cause of her difficulty. By treating just the speech difficulty you would probably be treating just the symptom and would not achieve complete cure.

The causes underlying her difficulty may be purely mechanical such as some malformation in her speech organs. Or, the defect may be a manifestation of an emotional difficulty. Perhaps she has reverted to baby speech because a younger child in the family has divided your attention to her. Or, there could be other basis for emotional change in her. So, to best deal with her speech difficulty I suggest you take her to a clinical psychologist who works with children and will make diagnostic tests of both the mechanical and emotional aspects to get at the very root of the trouble. When the doctor has discovered the cause of the trouble he may then send you to someone trained in speech to finish the treatment.

To D. T. S.: I agree with Anne that your moving problems will vary with the company and it's best to consult with them. If your furniture is sturdy, it's all right to leave things in the drawers but never matches or any fluid that might spill. Don't put too many sheets or heavy items in one drawer. Spread them around, one or two on top of small articles to prevent their skidding around.

A clothes hamper is wonderful for pillows or inside the glass doors in a china closet. Packers will pack food that hasn't been opened in boxes, also canned goods. But if your things go into storage, just the cans.

Can you tell me what clothing is necessary for a two-weeks' Canadian tour beginning the last week in August. Tourists are asked to bring one bag only. The itinerary includes the following: Niagara Falls, Lake Ontario, Toronto, Montreal, a St. Lawrence and Saguenay River cruise up as far as Bagotville. Should slacks be included? If so, what warmth? Should I carry fall clothing or a mixture of summer and fall?
E. J. D.

A mixture of summer and fall clothing would be advisable, as it is likely to be hot en route to Niagara, as well as further North on some days. On the other hand, it can get quite cold on shipboard—cold enough for lightweight woolen slacks, a sweater, and light topcoat when the wind blows. I should take a fall suit if I were you, plus a dark rayon or cotton travel dress. Your felt fall hat could be in a color that would go with either of these outfits. A dark matching purse, gloves, and shoes would complete your travel outfits.

For informal wear on shipboard, the slacks and a wool sports skirt will come in handy, plus sweaters and blouses or jackets. Light wool or rayon sports dresses may also be worn. Bright scarves to tie about your head, a beret, or other small sports hat would be appropriate. Take along a fall dressy frock for the evening. An evening gown will come in handy, too, if you go to any night clubs or hotels for dancing along the way. (It's not absolutely necessary; however, there's usually at least one formal evening dance on shipboard too.) Be sure to take a fairly lightweight top coat, for you'll be needing it in the evening up North and sometimes during the day. Such a plain coat will also come in handy in case of rain.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Father's Death Girl Cancelled Plans For June Wedding and Became Social Recluse To Show Respect; How Soon May She Go Out?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an engaged girl, 27, and had planned to be married in June. However, my father passed away the last of April and I postponed the wedding due to his death, and since then I haven't gone out or participated in any recreation or entertainment.

I would appreciate your advice (1) as to the proper length of time I should be in mourning; (2) also the proper social procedure to follow during that time; and (3) how long I should confine myself at home after my day's work in business is over,—in order to escape unfavorable criticism.

I live in what you might call a gossipy neighborhood, and I don't want to become a target of such remarks as, "Her father is dead only recently, yet I saw her coming from the movies the other evening, and she was with that man she goes with—," etc. My great respect for your good counsel causes me to look to you for guidance; so please answer soon. G. F.

Heavy Mourning Is Pagan Ritual

DEAR G. F.: Sensible observance of mourning consists in going quietly about the business of living after last rites for the deceased are finished.

It consists in doing one's best to keep occupied, by faithful attention to customary duties and active use of leisure time, thus to avoid brooding; and in refraining from confronting others with "conscious" reminders of personal sorrow or recent bereavement.

In general, the modern trend in enlightened society is away from old-style heavy mourning, with accent on gloom in dress and deportment for a fixed period, as supposed proof of grief or respect for the dead. And I think a close study of history would reveal that this brand of mourning is simply a hangover of pagan superstition, anyway.

As I understand, the pagans feared harm from "spirits" on the loose after death, and their season of mourning was, in part at least, a precautionary matter of "laying low" and doing penance for their sins, and of wearing black as "magic" protection against the "haunt," in case a vengeful spook came prowling.

Jesus Emphasized the Living Present

IN MATTHEW 8:22, Jesus tells a disciple who asks leave to bury his father, "Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead."—a cryptic march-order which certainly suggests that dynamic Christian living cannot be combined with backward-looking sentiment or mournful absorption in irreparable loss.

Nowadays the average Christian family, versed in modern social usage, doesn't cancel a wedding date because of a death in the family a month or so earlier. Rather, the custom is to adhere to the date, but omit a "grand splash" if such had been planned, and have a small wedding followed by a family gathering.

Also, except in official circles, where tradition lingers on, the general practice nowadays is to dress as usual, not donning black or armbands, and to continue a normal routine, unobtrusively. After a death in the family, nice people don't go to balls, or take a leading part in purely social activities until a later season, says Emily Post. But in your case, after weeks of seclusion, visits to the movies are permissible outings, surely; and if any neighbors criticize that, their judgment is meanly valueless. M. H.

By Genevieve Reynolds

THROUGHOUT history First Ladies of the Old Dominion State have been renowned for their charm, beauty and graciousness. But should tall, slender Helen Hill Miller, wife of Virginia gubernatorial candidate Francis Pickens Miller, become chatelaine of the Governor's Mansion, she will set a new record in talents.

Cosmopolite, author and economist, she also excels in hymn writing. She is the author of the Methodist hymn, "Follow the Gl[illegible]," now sung all over the world.

[illegible]n it comes to economics, she can hold her own with any male expert. During the campaign, she's on leave of absence as head of the American staff of the London Economist. More than 25 economic writers work under her direction in various regions of the United States.

Two Sons

However, she's equally famous as an author. Among her seven published books are "George Mason, Constitutionalist," written in 1938 to give due credit to the great Alexandrian whom she termed, "the most forgotten of the founding fathers." She also wrote "France, Crossroads of a Continent"; and "The Giant of the Western World" in colloboration with her husband in the 1920's.

She is a regular contributor to magazines including the Atlantic Monthly, Yale Review and Virginia Quarterly.

After graduating from Bryn Mawr College, alert, hazel-eyed Mrs. Miller garnered a Ph.D degree in political science from the University of Chicago, a diploma in political science from Oxford University, England, plus a certificate from the Institute of Higher International Studies, Geneva, Switzerland.

What with jumping back and forth to England for the London Economist, writing books, she has managed to learn cooking and rear two sons, Robert Day, 14, and Andrew Day, 16.

One of her greatest joys is farming . . . she likes growing and deep freezing her own vegetables as well as producing an artistic flower garden. Photography is another of her hobbies, which she hopes to find more time to develop.

Incidentally, Helen Miller doesn't use rouge, lipstick or mascara. She generally goes in for softly tailored clothes.

Queried about her most exciting assignment to date, she answered, "This political campaign. It's the most fascinating experience to date. It's fun getting out meeting different types and varieties of people."

Interviewed at the Miller-for-Governor headquarters in Alexandria yesterday, she evaded comment on what she would do as First Lady, should her husband win the election over his opponents—GOP Candidate Walter Johnson; Remmie L. Arnold, John S. Battle and Horace Edwards—Democratic candidates.

"I have been thinking in terms of the primary," explained Mrs. Miller, "instead of finding out the duties of a Governor's wife."

Travels With Husband

Now until the primary, August 2, Mrs. Miller will travel about the State with her husband, help out at his headquarters whenever and wherever needed.

Mrs. Miller and Dr. Meta Glass, president emeritus of Sweetbriar College and sister of the late Senator Carter Glass, shared honors yesterday at a tea given by the Alexandria Women's Miller-for-Governor group at historic Gadsby's Tavern. Dr. Glass ventured into politics for the first time to support Francis Pickens Miller for Governor of Virginia, taking over the State chairmanship of the Women's Miller-for-Governor Committee.

Mrs. Cochrane, Charles Thayer To Wed in Fall

The United States Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. James C. Dunn have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Cynthia Dunn Cochrane, to Charles Wheeler Thayer of Philadelphia. The wedding will take place in the fall in Rome.

Mr. Thayer is the son of the late George Thayer and Mrs. Thayer of Villanova, Pa. He is director of the "Voice of America," the State Department foreign broadcasting service.

The bride-elect attended Foxcroft School in Virginia and Bennington College, Vermont. She made her debut in 1940, and she has been residing in Rome for the past two years. She is the former Mrs. Maximilian E. Cochrane, and she is the niece of A. Watson and Laurence Armour of Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Thayer attended St. Paul's School and was graduated in 1933 from the United States Military Academy at West Point. He entered the United States Foreign last war. In Austria he served as a lieuterant colonel during the last war. In Austrial he served as Deputy Chief of Military Forces and in Yugoslavia he served as Chief of the American Military Mission.

Meyer Plays Beethoven At Phillips

By Paul Hume

Few pianists are ever eager to tackle Beethoven's Hammerklavier sonata except in the privacy of their own studios.

To program it on a night fully capable of being one of the hottest in the season seems folly in some ways. Yet Charlton Meyer made it the focal point of his recital last night in the Phillips Gallery.

The sonata requires 50 minutes to play, taken at Meyer's pacing. It taxes upper and lower registers of the piano in a way few compositions written for that instrument do. Its slow movement is a miracle of sustained writing, seldom properly realized in public performance. The closing fugue is ugly in sound intentionally, and difficult to play. It is equally difficult to comprehend on hearing.

In view of all this, it is to Meyer's great credit that he gave a good account of the sonata. His tone is luminous, easy and unforced. He understands the shape and meaning of the music which is the most important factor in any work of this nature.

It is also astonishing that he should possess so easily the technique required for the sonata, since it makes demands equaled by few piano writings. We have only two items on which we differ with the young artist. First we feel that there are too many points at which he indulges the mannerism of hesitation before a decisive chord or single note, as in the transition to G Major in the slow movement.

And the entire slow movement must move at a more reasonable pace. Beethoven has marked it with a metronome indication of 92. Meyer played it closer to 72 and the difference is hard on the lifeline of the melody. His tone in the slow movement is a thing of rare quality. But the mood cannot be sustained properly at that speed.

It was a fine account, with years and years more to work on it. The Hammerklavier is a score no one ever puts aside as finished.

Two men were indicted here yesterday on a charge of raping a 30-year-old Government employe at her 1601 Argonne pl. nw. apartment.

They are Oakley J. Powers, 29, 1723 G st. nw., and Beaman Heath, 24, 540 20th st. S. Arlington.

According to court papers, the two men barged into the woman's quarters with a bottle of champagne, forced her to drink and then made her submit to their advances by threatening her with death.

Among 36 Indictments

This was among 36 indictments returned by the District grand jury.

Herbert W. Burris, 33, 431 5th st. se., was charged with carnal knowledge in connection with a 14-year-old girl. According to the girl's statement, he offered her money but she refused it.

Robert T. Patterson, 1236 7th st. nw., was charged with raping a 25-year-old woman as she slept, on June 28, 1949. She awakened, but he stifled her screams, police said.

A 19-year-old youth is responsible for the theft of five suitcases containing $1391 from trains in the Union Station here, according to a true bill. He is Charles L. Johnson of 719 Florida ave. ne.

Charged with illegally receiving three of the suitcases and contents was Catherine B. Glover, 21, 25 L st. nw.

Nurse Is Charged

Mrs. Virgie E. Pollard, 51, a practical nurse of 1724 Montello ave. ne., was charged with performing an abortion on a 17-year-old unmarried girl for $50.

John Scott, 38, of 1217 Fairmont st. nw., was charged in a five-count indictment with operation of a numbers lottery and possession of numbers slips.

A holdup of an icecream store was charged to Vance C. Nessly, 18, of 518 Missouri ave. nw. He got $9, it was charged.

Donald V. Reynolds, 28, of Houston, Tex., was charged with embezzlment of $447.59 while he was a night manager of the Doubert Drug and Restaurant in the Greyhound Bus Terminal.

Suit to Recover Marine Base Land Title Dismissed

A suit seeking to recover title to 5000 acres at the Quantico Marine Base, acquired by the Government in 1918, was dismissed yesterday in Alexandria Federal Court.

Earl T. Ellis, receiver of the Quantico Co., Inc., from which the land was acquired, claimed the Government had never properly acquired title to the land for which it paid $269,477.

Judge Don Gilliam of North Carolina, who heard the case by special designation, ruled the Government had acted properly under an Act of Congress, and noted that the company had been satisfied with the settlement when the transaction was made.

New Moonshine Blend—Stocking Flavor

Cleveland, July 25 (U.P.).—Police today held two men for illegal distillery operations.

After authorities destroyed four hogsheads of mash they reported the brew as a mixture of grain, potato peelings, garbage, coffee grounds and several pairs of old stockings.

Police quoted one of the men as saying "the stockings give it the flavor."

U. S. Air Force Couple Mysteriously Attacked

Hamburg, Germany, July 25 (AP).—An American Air Force officer and his wife were mysteriously attacked by three unidentified men on a country road in the British zone last night, United States Air Force officials reported today.

The couple, Lieut. and Mrs. Harvey Konitz, of Chicago, suffered cuts and bruises. Konitz is stationed at the American airlift base at Celle.

An Air Force spokesman said the reason for the attack was a mystery.

Cap. Airlines Sets 4-Year Income Peak

By S. Oliver Goodman

Capital Airlines yesterday reported net income of $253,390 for June, the best month in four years.

As a result the Washington-based airline emerged from the red with a net income of $92,035 for the first six months this year. A $740,000 nonoperating profit realized in April boosted the six-month net to $832,117. This compared with a deficit of $575,766 in the first half of 1948.

June operating revenue of $2,415,956 was one of the best in the firm's history. Revenue passenger miles last month totaled 37,281,078, a gain of 37.5 per cent over the same 1948 month.

President J. H. Carmichael pointed out that net working capital on June 30 amounted to $1,507,000, the highest in three years. For the 12 months ended June 30, he added, net income of $791,800 was equal to $1.65 a common share. This was exclusive of the $740,000 profit from purchase of debentures to satisfy the accumulated sinking fund requirements.

Capital Airlines employs more than 3100 persons, of whom about 1500 are in the Washington area.

FINAL PAYMENT: Stockholders of The American Co., Washington finance firm which voted to dissolve la tein 1947, will receive a final liquidation of $13.20 a share. Previously, two liquidating dividends of $60 and $40 a share were paid on April 1 and June 28 last year. The total of $113.20 a share was a pleasant surprise to stockholders. American Co. stock in 1947 traded between $65 and $70 a share. Final payment will be made August 1 or thereafter to stockholders who present their certificates to the trust department of the Liberty National Bank. The committee in charge of American Co.'s liquidation included: James M. Johnston, Thornton W. Owen and Leon Tobriner.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

Tonight is the night of the church festival. It's taken days of preparation, but things have gone smoothly because all the committee members have worked so well together.

I think that's the secret of success in any undertaking. Teamwork is just as important among friends and neighbors as it is in sports, in business and lots of other things. I know that's true of party-line telephone service.

Teamwork on a party line means allowing an interval between calls so that others may use the line . . . answering the telephone promptly . . . giving up the line quickly when it's needed in an emergency. When good party-line neighbors work together, they help themselves and everyone else on the line to better telephone service.

New York Cotton

New York, July 25 (AP).—Cotton futures were irregular today in slow dealings. The market started off steady on trade and New Orleans buying, but rallying tendencies were soon reversed on light but persistent liquidation and small hedging which found demand indifferent. Distant months turned weak on Washington reports, indicating a new move developing in the Senate favoring flexible farm price supports instead of an extension of the high 90 per cent of parity loan voted by the House last week. Final prices were 85 cents a bale lower to 25 cents higher.

Dr. Glass Backs Miller For Governor

Dr. Meta Glass, president emeritus of Sweet Briar College, said last night that Francis Pickens Miller, one of Virginia's four Democratic gubernatorial candidates, has an "open mind" on labor legislation.

The sister of the late Senator Carter Glass said that on labor legislation Miller will be able "to hear and consider and affirm existing practices or change them with no promises to anyone."

She spoke in behalf of Miller's candidacy in an address heard over Radio Station WPIK, Alexandria, and a Virginia network.

Dr. Glass turned a critical eye on the editorial stand taken by the newspapers published by her nephews, the Senator's son and grandson.

Hits Paper's Stand

She noted that the Lynchburg News has editorially called on Miller to "repudiate the support of labor by assuring its leaders that he will not consider Virginia's laws as possible of change."

"His supporters," declared Dr. Glass, "would not be supporting Mr. Miller if that were his position on any subject. Virginia's labor laws seem to many of his supporters good laws, but even they are not sacrosanct . . ."

Meanwhile, at Staunton, it was reported that "half a dozen" county agents in the Shenandoah County Valley are "fed up with taking orders from Senator Harry F. Byrd."

Anti-Byrd Feeling Noted

Thomas F. Clemmer, a campaigner for Miller in Augusta County, said that rural sentiment in the valley is shifting to the "antiorganization" candidate because of "inefficiency and complacency" in the State Department of Agriculture.

Miller visited Staunton to make a "nonpolitical" speech sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Miller will be guest of honor at a reception sponsored by the Miller-for-Governor-Club of Arlington from 8 to 10 p. m. Wednesday.

Miller will speak informally at the rally, to be held at the home of former State Senator Frank L. Ball, sr., 4527 N. 17th st., Arlington.

Tobin Raises Pay Of Steel Workers On U.S. Contracts

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin yesterday raised the minimum wage in the Nation's major steel-producing areas to $1.23 an hour for work on Government contracts worth more than $10,000.

The United Steel Workers (CIO) had requested the increase over industry protests.

Tobin exercised his authority under the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Law just three days before President Truman's fact-finding board in the steel wage dispute begins public hearings in New York. But he said his action should have no effect on the inquiry into the union's demands for a fourth postwar general wage increase, insurance benefits and pension plans.

Reynolds 'Considering' Another Senate Try

Asheville, N. C., July 25 (AP).—Former Senator Robert R. Reynolds of Asheville said today he is "considering" running for another term in the U. S. Senate next year.

He said in an interview that he has received a "considerable" number of letters from friends urging him to run.

Rally Opens For Battle In Richmond

Richmond, Va., July 25 (AP). Supporters of gubernatorial candidate John S. Battle gathered here tonight for a State-wide political rally at Hotel John Marshall.

Motorcades bearing the party faithful who are supporting Battle in the August Democratic primary drove to Richmond from many parts of the State.

In size, Battle's headquarters billed it as the biggest event of the campaign and said the crowd that is expected might overflow the air-conditioned hotel ballroom.

The schedule called for the rally to begin just after 8 p. m. with the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Principal speakers during the night will be former State Senator Leonard G. Muse of Roanoke, J. Lindsay Almond, jr., attorney general, and Senator Battle, in that order.

Sidney S. Kellam, Battle's State campaign chairman, is chairman of the rally. Muse will be introduced by John J. Wicker, jr., of Richmond, and Almond by State Senator A. S. Harrison of Lawrenceville.

Besides the speakers, the stage included members of Battle's campaign committee and other workers for the candidate.

Edwards Gets Backing of Flannagan

Bristol, Va., July 25 (AP).—Former Ninth District Congressman John W. Flannagan, tonight lauded a "sales tax" solution to school problems and attacked "machine" government in an address backing the Democratic gubernatorial candidacy of Horace H. Edwards.

He wanted to know if the people in Virginia were going to be content for the Democratic party to "be run . . . by the oligarchy with headquarters north of the Potomac and a branch office in Richmond?"

"I believe in a Democratic organization," he said, "but I want it manned by Democrats—not by a few apple pickers and Dixiecrats.

"If Horace Edwards is elected I believe we can build around him such a party, and this belief is one of the causes motivating me to support him," said Flannagan.

Flannagan then started to assess the campaign efforts of Edwards' three Democratic opponents for the nomination:

Of Remmie L. Arnold he said: "I am not going to take Remmie too seriously. Why should I, when no one else does?"

Francis Pickens Miller, he said, is the "International-Oxford gentleman . . . I understand that manual toil is unknown to his parlor-pink hands. With such a background this is the man that now would pose as a champion of labor."

As for John S. Battle: "His 'freedom of thought and action" has been retarded by the machine . . . I am going to bury him without much ado . . . and in loving memory I will use this epitaph:

"'He was a great man until he contracted the malady of machineitis.'"

Flannagan said the epitaph should end:

"From this he died on August 2, 1949."

Arnold Denies Withdrawing From Race

Newport News, Va., July 25 (AP). A promise that he will "stick to the end" in the race for the Democratic Gubernatorial candidacy was made tonight by Remmie L. Arnold.

In a radio address (WHYU), Arnold said, "I want it distinctly understood that I will not withdraw and that I will stick to the end because I believe the voters of Virginia are sick and tired of being pressured by this machine in Virginia."

Arnold, who slashed away at a sales tax proposed by Candidate Horace H. Edwards, referred to an editorial in a last week's issue of the Newport News Daily Press.

"You, I am sure, have been reading the newspapers and listening to the radio about the pressure that has been and is being put on to get me to withdraw from this race," he said, and added, "even your own paper in an editorial last week asked me to withdraw."

Then he said "this type of pressure is nothing new. It's an old political trick. It is a trick of the machine. They are afraid that their candidate, John Battle, will be defeated. The owner of this paper evidently is a machine man and pressure is being put on all around."

Arnold said that as a grandfather he desired the best in schools and the best teachers.

But he added, "I am more concerned about what these kids are going to do when they leave school and have to go to work."

He asked what the State government was doing about bringing new business and industry into the State in order that "these children may find employment after leaving school."

He said if he was elected Governor he expected "to do everything in his power to bring into Virginia businesses and new industries."

Urging that the State be made more attractive to tourists, he said: "Certainly we do not want to put a sales tax on purchases that these tourists will make in our State. We can make the tourists enjoy their visits and spend more time and money by making Virginia a State without a sales tax."

Fire Destroys Power Boat as Occupants Flee

A 15-foot power boat called "Miss Pulchritude" was destroyed last night by fire which caused two occupants to flee for safety.

According to police, owner Leonard Shope, 30, of 2819 R st. se., and a companion, Virgil Tinsmen, 32, of Georgetown University, were cleaning the engine when it burst into flames. The boat was at Key Bridge near the Virginia shore.

The two men swam and waded safely to the Virginia bank of the river. Firemen attempted to drag the boat to shore in order to extinguish the blaze, but were unsuccessful. Shope told police the boat was valued at $1000.

British Oppose Devaluation of Pound Sterling

London, July 25 (NYHT).—Spokesmen for all parties in the House of Lords expressed opposition to devaluation of the pound sterling.

The subject came up during a debate in the uppe rchamber of Britain's economic crisis and Viscount Addison, leader of the House, said, "I am glad to find that this policy (antidevaluation) is supported on all sides of the House."

Lord Addison told the Lords that the government, for which he is the spokesman in that chamber, "has no intention whatever of entering into the rash experiment of devaluation."

4 Policemen Arrested For Beating Negroes

Tampa, Fla., July 25 (AP).—Four law enforcement officers in Polk County were arrested today on Federal indictments charging that they beat up two Negroes in violation of the Negroes' civil rights.

United States District Attorney Herbert S. Phillips identified the men as Police Chief William C. Brock, sr., of Mulberry; Police Chief William N. LeVault of Bartow; Roscoe W. Thornhill, a Bartow policeman; and Paul Jennings of Lakeland, Polk County deputy sheriff.

Stouffer Hits Fiscal Policy In Virginia

Roanoke, Va., July 25 (AP).—Too much of Virginia's fiscal policy is the result of pure politics, Dr. William H. Stauffer warned today.

Not one of the four candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor "has yet presented a reasonably sound and consistent platform on financing Virginia's government," he added.

Dr. Stauffer pointed out that only one of the four suggests more taxes; yet all say more money can be spent. He did not mention the candidates by name.

Dr. Stauffer spoke at a luncheon meeting of some 150 members of the Virginia Retail Merchants Association here in Hotel Roanoke. The association is holding its forty-third annual convention.

The speaker is research director for the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce. As a member of the Tax Study Commission of Virginia, he has made intensive surveys of how to go about "financing Virginia's Government"—his topic today.

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK—Arnold Grant, the California lawyer, is in Europe arranging the foreign publication of Eleanor Roosevelt's book and to get further confirmation of the authenticity of the Van Gogh painting acquired by William Goetz . . . Gertrude Lawrence, returing here August 16, will do either "September Tide" or the new Behrman play, "Jane," at the Denis Playhouse. "Miss Liberty" costs the producers only $186,000, a low figure for a musical. The show is playing to cheering standees . . . Ernest Hemingway is down to 205 pounds, which he considers his best writing weight. He's finishing his novel after a delay caused by an eye infection . . . The Saturday Evening Post will go all-out for cheesecake in an article by Pete Martin on the corset and bra business, with color photos by Ivan Dmitri.

Paramount officials met last week to decide on advertising policy for "The Heiress" and "Sampson and Delilah." They decided that the displays on "The Heiress" will show a clean-shaven Sir Ralph Richardson, because when the public sees a bearded actor in an ad it believes the picture to be a period film, which is bad box offic. Throughout the film, however, Richardson wears a beard . . . They decided that the ads for "Sampson and Delilah" will show Victor Mature with a beard—because the public expects Biblical figures to be shown with beards. In the film, however, Mature is clean shaven

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Kersh were legally separated last week, and the writer is living alone in his coldwater flat on First ave. He has malaria, for which he takes doses of a drug that affects his eyes and ears. Last week, after taking the medicine, he turned on the radio, sat back in his chair to listen to the music, and shut his eyes. Suddenly, there was a frightful silence. He opened his eyes—to an inky blackness. He found his cigarette lighter and spun the wheel. Still darkness . . . Touched by fear into a desperate calm, he groped for a match and struck it. At last there was light. And then he heard sound—the curses of his neighbors at the main fuse which had blown. And his lighter, he found, had no flint.

Elena Nikolaidi of the Vienna State Opera, is telling of the Red membership drive in Czechoslovakia. A member who brings in three new party members doesn't have to pay dues for a year. For five new party members, he doesn't have to wear the party button. And for bringing in 10 new members, he gets a certificate that he never belonged to the Communist Party.

The Hollywood Reporter's Herb Stein announced last week that Paul Douglas is the film colony's No. 1 Lothario . . . Douglas is an odd Lothario. He's been married five times, although he's still in his 30's. After one of his weddings he gave a housewarming, and made the event a literal one—by applying a match to the seat of a rush-bottom chair in which guest Jack Smart sat, and then threw the burning chair into the fireplace.

Life's Darkest Moment

THE FAMILY SCRAPBOOK

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Overdoing Neatness

In the United States we have made neatness and cleanliness almost moral virtues. From the early years we stress their importance. And, indeed, there are real satisfactions coming out of seeing things clean and orderly. But may we not overdo the job at times?

Many adults have learned to be so "fussy" about these things that they cannot tolerate standards of cleanliness and neatness not as high as theirs. Irritation that may grow into quarrelling between husbands and wives comes because one drops his clothes all over the place, leaves a ring around the bathtub, or makes a mess somewhere else in the house. Others make the family uncomfortable because they can't sit still if everything is not "picked up."

Apparently these strong feelings develop because in childhood parents have become very emotional about developing habits of cleanliness and order. Those who as children have been made uncomfortable and unhappy if everything was not kept spic and span tend to carry over the same feelings into adult life. It's more important in human relations to be a comfortable sort of person with whom to live than to be a model of neatness.

We parents ought to check up once in a while and see whether we may not be overdoing this neatness business.

Fairfax Court To Hear School Dispute Today

The Falls Church-Fairfax County dispute over control of two school buildings in the city of Falls Church, will be back in Fairfax Circuit Court at 11 a. m. today, for a hearing before Judge C. G. Quesenbery.

Judge Quesenbery ruled June 3 that the year-old city of Falls Church has a right to control its own school system.

Negotiations between the city and Fairfax County reached an impasse following the order, however, when the county refused to turn over the Oak Street School and the Falls Church High School, both within city limits to Falls Church.

"You aren't the only one who thinks you are just wonderful"

TRY IT

CHALK A SIDEWALK SHUFFLEBOARD COURT

This is a fine game for boys and girls. The equipment for playing can be made in a short time by cutting out six-inch discs with a coping saw from one inch thick boards. Eight cut-out blocks or discs will give each of the two players four to a set.

Each set should be painted a different color to help in keeping score. Screw a three by six-inch board to a broomstick for a cue or pusher, and you are ready to mark out a four by six-foot court on the sidewalk or driveway with chalk.

Draw a "deadline" about 30 feet from the numbered squares and take turns shooting the blocks. Try to put your own men in the square, and knock your opponent's men off. The one reaching 50 first, wins the game.

This Funny World

"Do you have a hundred-to-one shot I can depend on?"

What's the Verdict?

Disappointed Criminal

Q. A prisoner, soon after sentence, presents to the court a petition for a new trial, on the following basis: (1) He had been charged with four counts of embezzlement; his lawyer had advised him to plead guilty, assuring him that he would get sentences of three years on each charge, to be served concurrently; that acting on that advice he had pleaded guilty and had been sentenced to four years on each count to be served consecutively, totaling 16 years; and (2) he was not guilty. Is he entitled to a new trial on the basis of these contentions?

A. Since the prisoner knew the nature of the charges made against him, was not coerced by the judge or the prosecutor into making a guilty plea, but acted on advice of counsel, and knowingly pleaded guilty, he has no grounds for legal complaint. The rule is that "a mere disappointed expectation of great leniency does not vitiate a plea." Since the guilty plea was voluntarily made, after due reflection and the prisoner had an opportunity for his day in court, the court will not consider the merits of his new contention that he is not guilty. . . . F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

LIVE & LEARN

Mrs. Mary Hedrick of 629 Mississippi ave., Silver Spring, Md., sets me straight on the latest in automotive designing.

In a recent column I said that none of the postwar cars had front hoods that could be opened from the outside. (All I've seen have been controlled by a lever under the dash.)

But Mrs. Hedrick says that the '49 Chevs have a gadget for opening from the outside—and until I can afford to check her facts by buying a '49, I'll have to take her word for it.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. R. Wood, 7410 Piney Branch rd., Takoma Park, Md.: I agree with you, because I've never been able to make head or tail of those "form sheets." But most horse players swear by them. Especially when they're not swearing at them.

Don Roth, 603 Erie ave., Takoma Park, Md.: Most newspapers try to proofread all type before an edition rolls. But sometimes a story breaks late, and the type must go straight from the linotype into the forms, before the proofroom even sees the copy. That's why you see lots of typos in the "bulldog." But most of them are cleaned up by the time the next edition goes in.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Do other people also have trouble getting doctors to make home calls?

My husband's infected foot needed attention recently, so I called his doctor's office, and told the nurse there that we wanted the doctor to come out and tend to it.

The nurse asked a lot of questions and finally told me that the doctor couldn't make a mile-and-a-half trip for something as trivial as an infected foot; if my husband wanted treatment, he'd have to come to the office.

I called another doctor, and by the time he got there it was necessary to send my husband to the hospital in an ambulance.

I know that doctors are busy, but it seems to me that a case like this is not a credit to the medical profession. L. E.

Dear Mrs. E.:

I have deleted your name and address, so that we can speak frankly without embarrassing you or your doctor, and have presented this case to several able physicians for their comment.

They tell me that if the facts are exactly as stated (they remind me that we haven't heard the other side yet) the doctor's nurse "certainly behaved in a very strange manner."

They say that most doctors instruct their nurses that if there's any doubt whatever about the necessity for making a home visit, the doctor should be put on the line, so that he can make his own decision.

"Even when we feel that the call is probably frivolous," say the doctors, "we usually go anyhow—just to play it safe. Unless there were unusual circumstances in this particular case, we don't understand why this woman's doctor didn't follow the usual procedure.

"The Medical Society has a grievance committee to handle just such complaints, however, and the committee is ready at all times to hear from such complainants as your correspondent."

What's more, say the doctors, there's no reason why anybody in this area should ever be without emergency medical attention. The Society's Medical Bureau (Republic 6100) can furnish a doctor for an emergency at all hours of the day and night.

That might be a good number to jot down on the cover of your telephone book—just in case.

COURTESY?

Rita Meaney of 3618 Military rd. nw. snorts at my reference to Police Superintendent Barrett's recent "courtesy" order to his department.

Rita says that early one Sunday morning, she and her sister were being driven home by a young Navy veteran who is now attending Cornell. The car was vintage '39, and broke down en route, on Connecticut ave.

"Along came the masterful minions of the law," reports Rita. "Four of them, in Cruiser 81. Evidently carrying out Major Barrett's 'Be Polite' order, the policeman in the right front seat greeted us with: 'Whatsamatter—are ya drunk?' The Navy veteran, who is very quiet by nature and a thorough gentleman, politely replied that he was not. But that didn't stop the policemen. For 20 minutes we got a running stream of insults and abuse, and repeated barbs about 'drinking'—but no help."

The stranded motorists were finally befriended by a passing cab driver, who gave them a push. "By this time, the cops had tired of their sport, and left. But after all that abuse, they made no report of the incident—proving that we had done nothing to be criticized for."

Very interesting. Looks like the "courtesy" campaign instructions didn't reach a couple of the boys.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Inside Story of Farm Bill Battle

By Drew Pearson

There was more than meets the eye behind the fight of Tennessee's Representative Albert Gore to kill the Brannan farm plan in the House.

Truman Administration friends had counted upon Gore's support, but what they had not counted upon was his burning ambition to become a Senator.

Gore

For some time, Gore has had his eye on ailing, aged Senator Kenneth McKellar, also of Tennessee. It is no secret that some day Gore hopes to fill McKellar's shoes.

This was known to Allan Kline, president of the conservative Farm Bureau. Since the Farm Bureau is a power in Tennessee politics, Kline promised to support Gore for the Senate if he would oppose the Brannan plan.

Behind Kline's own opposition to the Brannan plan is a bitter jealousy for Secretary of Agriculture Brannan. Kline had expected to be Secretary of Agriculture himself under Dewey.

Backstage With Scott

Backstage debates over the ousting of Representative Hugh Scott as chairman of the Republican National Committee were more significant than the fragmentary news leaking to the press. The debates had two important highlights.

1. Bitterness was almost as intense as that between the Dixiecrat and Truman wings of the Democratic Party—especially between Taft and Dewey cohorts.

2. The party leaders, expecting a Republican victory in 1952, already are feverishly moving for position.

That was why stubborn Mr. Scott—Dewey's man—was not finally ousted until 16 States signed a petition to call a meeting of the full committee for ousting purposes; also until a secret meeting of party leaders in the Mayflower Hotel initiated a confidential memo pledging themselves to bring about Scott's exit.

These party leaders included Senator Brewster of Maine and Martin of Pennsylvania, Texas Committeeman Rentfro Creager, who has wabbled between the Taft and Dewey camps; and Pennsylvania Committeeman Mason Owlett, who represents Joe Grundy's high-tariff Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association and originally put Scott in the chairmanship.

The fact that Owlett finally initialed a memo agreeing to Scott's exit meant that his end had come.

Taft Pours Political Oil

But just as victory was within the Taft crowd's grasp their leader wavered. The Senator from Ohio indicated that he wanted the new chairman of the GOP to be acceptable to all factions of the party. He wanted harmony, not a row with Dewey over the chairmanship.

This caused another fervid meeting in the Mayflower Hotel—once, incidentally, the camping ground of bigwig Democrats. The meeting took place in room 453, occupied by the delightfully talkative Creager, and those present included Harrison Spangler of Iowa, an ardent Taft man; West Virginia's committeeman, Walter Hallanan, also for Taft; Committeeman John E. Jackson of Louisiana, one of the few admitted Republicans in that State; faithful Carroll Reece of Tennessee who was made national chairman three years ago by Taft; and Creager, himself, who claims to be for Taft.

The meeting was called to raise Cain over their idol's getting too close to their political enemy, Tom Dewey, which they believed would be the greatest mistake Taft could make. Taft was a great statesman, but no politician, someone wailed. Dewey, said another, was finished—dead—there was no use appeasing a dead man.

Finally, Carroll Reece tried to get Taft on the phone. It was now around midnight, but the Senator was located at his brother-in-law's home in New York. Reece talked to him, but was too excited, and surrendered the phone to Creager.

Taft Pours Political Oil

Taft agreed to meet with the group in Washington next day, July 20, which he did, again in room 453, with approximately the same group present.

By then Reece had calmed down and told Taft bluntly that his old friends felt he was turning his back on their past loyalty.

Taft, he said, was now letting his name be used by the backers of John Danaher, former Senator from Connecticut, to be the new national chairman. And Reece wanted it remembered that this same Danaher was Dewey's candidate for the chairmanship against him in 1946.

Taft listened sympathetically. Later in the day he got together with Senator Brewster and they arranged for Danaher to withdraw his name as candidate for the GOP chairmanship.

However, Taft still believes that the Grand Old Party should bind up its wounds and the leaders should do more than bow politely when they meet.
